The House on the other hand suspended its sitting in the midst of a fight, passing up the sessions scheduled for last night and this morning. The members simply decided to quit although their action means the death of many bills which can not possibly be acted upon

The closing session of the House was marked by passage of a few bills, including one to allow Cambria county to sue the state and one to validate deeds given by trustees without filing authority. The tax receiver bill, which affects York and Dauphin counties, was granted an extension of time. During the considerations of the bills the members were called to account by Speaker Baldwin for throwing things and for inattention. Then some one moved to adjourn and it lost by a few votes. Another motion to adjourn was made but before it could be acted upon Chairman Ramsey, of the rules committee, proposed a special calendar consisting of revenue, appropriation and Senate bills. Messrs. Fowler and Maurer objected that it would block out the compensation amendment bills and were about to get consideration for them as a special order when Mr. Beyer tried to put on the small council bill. It started the Philadelphia fight all over again. Then some one tried to add the full crew bill and the prohibition amendment and other measures. Suddenly Mr. Walter moved to table the whole matter, which was done and the House quit where it began almost an hour before.

Higher Priced Beef Sure to Come Says Lieut.-Governor McClain

Lancaster, June 22.—"Meat prices, will not decline as long as we continue to feed Europe. Since we shall have to feed Europe until Europe is able to feed herself, which will be a long time after the close of this war, meat prices will be high."

The foregoing statement was made by Lieutenant Governor Frank B. McClain, known as a cattle expert and one of Lancaster's foremost cattle brokers.

Then he capped his statement by prophesying that beef would rise two or three cents higher in the retail markets within a month or six weks. Lieutenant Governor McClain ridiculed the slogan "plant more grain and you will lower meat prices." He pointed out that a milk and meat famine would follow if pasteurage were slighted in favor of wheat and corn.

"There is n remedy for the high prices of beef," he repeated. "At that it is the cheapest meat you can buy. It returns more nourishment. It is cheaper than mutton."

Mr. McClain ascribed the high beef prices to the exports of dried and canned meats from the West 5 and to the ability of more people to buy meat because of higher wages.
