Clearing the Decks

The House started to clear the calendar by drastic methods about 10.30 p. m. The bills dropped included: The Buckman motor vehicle license, providing for payment of consequential damages from taking or injury of property by municipalities for public works; providing for the change of venue in certain cases; repealing the return of taxes on seated land act of 1913; regulating assessment of costs by magistrates, and the McConnell bounty bill.

bill.

Toward midnight so many bills were dropped from the calendar that senators came over from the north wing to see how things were going and the space in front of the Speaker's desk was filled with legislators seeking recognition to discuss bills.

The confusion became so great that er's desk was filled with legislators seeking recognition to discuss bills. The confusion became so great that Speaker Baldwin ordered a recess and the members paraded through the hall with state flags. The Speaker led with the hational flag.

A mock session was then held with Mr. McNichol, Philadelphia, presiding.

The House passed finally the Catlin bill regulating admission of boroughs to cities and the Hindman bill regulating insurance stock sales.

New Day Begun

At midnight the House formally adjourned the Wednesday session and at 12.05 began the Thursday session. Although members were in shirt sleeves and crowded about the space in front of the Speaker's desk, the proceedings incident to opening a new day were followed. The Speaker called the House to order, prayer was offered and the journal read.

The amendment to the fire mar-prayer was offered and the Journal read.

The amendment to the fire marshal law then came up and in the midst of the discussion a recess was taken until 1 a. m.

Immediately after recess the House passed finally the bill reorganizing the state fire marshal's force. There was an extended debate. The House then dropped a dozen bills, including a constable's fee bill.

dozen bills, including a constable's fee bill.

Bills passed as of Thursday were:
Enabling building and loan associations to invest in national and state bonds.

Providing for a commission to codify lunacy laws.

Forbidding distribution of discriminating matter against any religious sect or nationality.

Between 1 and 2 o'clock the House passed finally bills providing for employment of prisoners on roads; amending the soldiers' election act of 1864 to meet war conditions; the Crow constables' salary, Allegheny county salary increase and McKee prison labor bills.

An effort to reconsider the defeat of the Philadelphia branch Capitol bill was defeated.

The Siggins township code was reported from conference committee and passed without comment.

While waiting for conference reports the House indulged in singing.

The House took frequent recesses after 3 o'clock to await conference reports.
