

25 HIGHWAYS ARE CHANGED

Routes Switched Around in Omnibus Bill Which Passes

Changes are made in twenty-five state highway routes through an omnibus bill which passed the Senate and House. During the session nearly a hundred bills changing routes and adding new roads to the Sprout system were introduced, but the majority of those were killed off. One of the important changes in the omnibus bill is that which cuts fifteen miles from the distance between Pittsburgh and Philadelphia on the William Penn Highway, between Harrisburg and Newport.

to the New York line, Wellsboro and to the New York line, Wellsboro and Towanda, Bedford to Hollidaysburg, Bedford through Johnstown to Ebensburg, Somerset to Uniontown, Emporium to Lock Haven, Washington to Waynesburg, Towanda to Montrose, Tunkhannock to Towanda and McConnellsburg to the Maryland line.

Suffragists Make Jail Lively For Criminals

Washington, June 28.—Behind jail bars six women suffragists, convicted in police court yesterday of obstructing the sidewalk by displaying propaganda banners before the White House, held a song service and suffrage meeting for the other forty women inside the prison.

The suffragists were given their choice of $25 fines or three days in jail, and decided to go to jail. They did not attempt a hunger strike, and will be released Friday morning, part of yesterday and a few hours of Friday being counted as full days.

MRS. FINNEY HURT

While crossing the street in front of the Broad street market yesterday, Mrs. Maurice E. Finney, wife of Colonel Finney, commander of the Eighth Regiment, N. G. P., was slightly injured when she was struck by a motorcycle. She was taken to her home, 1407 North Front street.

LEGISLATURE NEWS

WANT NO MORE INVESTIGATIONS IN EARLY MORN

House Manhandles, Then Crumbles McNichol Inquiry Resolution

Members of the House demonstrated late yesterday afternoon that they wanted no more investigations into State government. The McNichol resolution for an inquiry into business methods was crumpled up after being manhandled by a number of legislators.

When the resolution was read in the House Mr. Glass, Philadelphia, objected to the use of the word "mismanagement" in the resolution. Mr. Showalter, Union, said he did not see any reason for the resolution as in his opinion the State government was run economically.

Mr. Simpson, Allegheny, explained the resolution, and Mr. Cox, Philadelphia, asked a number of questions of Mr. Simpson and raised the point that the resolution should be printed, but withdrew it. He contended that the Economy and Efficiency Commission should do the work.

Mr. Walter, Franklin, said the resolution was "an overnight" idea and that the State had no need to make another investigation. He said that its adoption would make the House ridiculous.

Mr. Hess, Lancaster, raised the point of order that the resolution had to be over under the rules. Mr. Whitaker, Chester, who was presiding, upheld the point.

The effect of the ruling was to put over the resolution for a day and unless the rule is suspended the resolution cannot be taken up.

DUPLEX ENGINES SOLVE A TRAFFIC PROBLEM

By placing the running gear of a discarded light engine behind one of their standard locomotives, mounting the tender on the running gear, connecting the gear by a flexible steam coupling with the superheater of the engine, the mechanical department of the Southern Railway made what the officials called a duplex engine, the tender serving as an auxiliary tractor. This solved a troublesome problem of operation on a sixty-eight-mile line of single track, where the grades are heavy and traffic often became congested.

HOUSEBOAT LIFE ENJOYED IN RIVER COLONIES

Several colonies of houseboats along the Willamette river at Portland, Ore., afford the occupants an enjoyable mode of life during the summer season and some of the boats are used as swiftings all the year round. They are moored side by side along the river bank, sometimes connected by boardwalks, and are within easy reach of the business center by car lines.

Young women engaged in business of offices and stores, as well as young men, find the houseboat life most attractive, healthful, and economical, and club together to meet the expense of purchasing a boat and keeping house. A simply furnished houseboat in an inexpensive colony may cost anywhere from $100 to $500, while in the more pretentious river colonies there are two-storied boats costing $1,500 and upward.—From the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

SESSION ENDS IN EARLY MORN

Both Houses Adjourn After Midnight; Long Session

The session of the General Assembly for 1917, the longest since 1897, closed this morning. The Senate adjourned at 12.57 o'clock, and the House at 1.17 o'clock.

The two houses were to have adjourned yesterday at noon, but the battle over the provisions in the general appropriation bill prolonged the sittings and made political history for Pennsylvania. The bill was printed no less than four times before it came before the House early this morning things had been so well advanced that there was no discussion and not a dissenting word was uttered. In the Senate concurrence was so rapid that the spectators who had lingered hardly knew what had happened.

The conference committee restored the $40,000 for farmers' institutes and gave the Department of Labor and Industry and Public Service Commission some items which had been cut out.

The conference committee also restored to the bill the provision that the Governor's contingent fund should be expended at his discretion. This provision has been carried in similar bills for the last two sessions, but the committee cut it out yesterday. Last night Senator E. H. Vore, of Philadelphia, served notice on the House that he would not stand for any humiliation of the Governor and insisted upon the restoration of the provision. The conferees reduced the contingent appropriation from $30,000 to $24,000 because he has only eighteen months to serve.

When Chairman Ramsey, of the House appropriations committee, announced the reinsertion of the clause the members of the House applauded. Senator Vore had said that unless the provision was put back his friends would not support the bill.

No one about legislative halls recalls anything like the controversies which raged over the session's general appropriation bill. The session of 1917 has had many unusual features and it was within a few hours of the final adjournment that the announced difference of opinion broke out among legislators over the reductions made in departmental items. Men connected with the Educational, Labor and Industry, Agricultural, Public Service and other departments secured the attention of legislators by their speeches, were besieged by Senators and Members urging that the drastic policy be modified.

The report of the conference committee was sent to the two houses shortly before noon but the pressure became so strong that it was recalled. The conferees began to stretch out and the men stationed in the House and Senate galleries to turn back the hands of the clocks had to do a duty every half hour. Twelve o'clock was called off at half past one and it was always between 10.30 and 11.45 o'clock in the morning.

Late in the day the conferees sent in their report and Mr. Flynn, Elk, one of the members of the committee, explained that $200,000 for Philadelphia suburbs and other provisions had been cut out. Chairman Ramsey, of the House appropriations committee, was taken to task about the provision that no state money should be paid to West Chester State Normal School, while Dr. G. M. Phillips remained as principal or was connected with it. Mr. Ramsey said this was done because potatoes had been injected into the school and it was desired to remove the cause. Mr. Sues, Schuylkill, a graduate, defended Dr. Phillips, and Messrs. Canon, Mercer, and Maurer, Berks, attacked the handling of the bill, while Mr. Milliron, Armstrong, declared it would set a bad precedent.

The controversy lasted almost an hour. It was intensely hot in the hall and the Speaker presided in shirt sleeves. Finally Mr. Stites, Pottsgomery, seconded by Mr. Mitchell, Jefferson, moved to send the bill back to conferees with instructions, but the point was made that the bill could not be reprinted until the next day and Mr. Flynn said conferees could not be instructed. The House then allowed the report to be printed, then allowed the conferees to be drawn but making another change refused to concur in Senate amendments. The old conferees were named again and the conferees were reported with the West Chester clause stricken out. Mr. Flynn's statement that agriculture would be further cared for in the budget evoked much discussion and finally Mr. Maurer launched into an extended attack on the labor and industry cuts.

Speaker Baldwin warned the members that if they defeated the bill it meant another day's sessions, to which Mr. Milliron raised objection. The bill was rejected, 50 yeas, needing 104 to pass. Soon after it was reconsidered. A recess was taken to allow members to get together and the heated feeling cooled out in many arguments. Mr. Maurer debated the cuts with Senator McNichol in the center of a ring of over fifty legislators and conferees. Mr. Gavin, taking exceptions to a remark by a member about rollcalls, threatened to strike him if the remark was repeated.

Realizing the seriousness of the situation legislative leaders began to send for members who had gone home. A canvass of the Senate showed that thirty-three Senators still here and about 150 Legislators in the city or nearby. A hurried cancellation of parlor or sleeping car accommodations and calling of hotels in the vicinity of Pittsburgh members who had started home were sent telegrams to various cities along the road and urged to return.

After the recess for supper, during which the clock went back almost to 10, members began to arrive from nearby counties, having left on the belief that the session was over. Frequent recesses were taken while the conferees were in work, and the members formed a chorus and sang about the session ending in "a tangle."

When the House was called together to hear a statement by Chairman Ramsey a heavy thunderstorm was raging and his remarks were punctuated by peals of thunder. The galleries and side aisles were crowded with people and the statement that the end was in sight was cheered.

Senator Eyre, Chester, rose to a question of personal privilege in the Senate late last night, and explained why the provision was placed in the appropriation bill that no money be appropriated to the West Chester

Normal School so long as Principal George M. Phillips was connected with the school. He said that Dr. Phillips had knowledge of the alleged immorality of an employee of the school and had failed to use this knowledge to have the employee dismissed. Mr. Eyre said he agreed to have the provision stricken from the bill in order not to endanger the measure's passage. He charged that Secretary Becht, of the State Board of Education, had openly lobbied in the House to have the provision stricken out of the bill.

MILITARY CONTROL OF ROADS

London.—To check joyriding and the misuse of government cars, many of the main roads out of London have been placed under military control. Officers or soldiers in motorcars are challenged and have to furnish particulars and produce authority for being away from their regiments. Civilian motorists are challenged to produce their petrol licenses.

W. Harry Baker Club to Hold Annual Picnic

The members of the W. Harry Baker Republican Club will hold a picnic on the Fourth of July, at a very selective spot in Peters Mountain. Several large automobiles will convey the members of the club to the picnic grounds, starting from the headquarters, 1421 Marion street, at 7 o'clock in the morning. The day will be spent playing games and a general romp in the mountains. A baseball game between the married men and the single men will be one of the main features. The committee in charge of the arrangements consists of the following: Marshall Ficklin, chairman; James Smith, Daniel Williams, Randolph Smith, Roland Lane, Charles Brunner and James Taylor.
