Starbuck was frowning sourly. "Suppose you make it a case of suspended judgment, Doc," he suggested. "The few of us here who know anything about it are giving John the benefit of the doubt. They'll have to show me, and half a dozen of us, before they can send him over the road."

"He knew they were after him?"

"Sure thing; and he had all the chance he needed to make his getaway. He was shot while he was trying to get between and stop the war and keep others from getting killed."

"It's a pity," said the surgeon, glancing across at the police captain to whom Colonel Baldwin was appealing. "They'll put him in the hospital cell at the jail, and that will cost him whatever slender chance he might otherwise have to pull through."

Starbuck looked up quickly. "Tell 'em he can't be moved, Doc Dan," he urged suddenly. And then: "You're Dick Maxwell's family physician, and Colonel Dexter's, and mine. Surely you can do that much for us?"

BE CANNY

Everybody can! Put your spare time into cans and jars.

Home canning is kitchen patriotism.

Don't have an empty preserving jar in your neighborhood next fall.

If you have more preserving jars than you can fill, lend them to a neighbor who will make them work for the nation.

Some neighbor surely can eat or put up surplus products from your place.

A quart of canned peaches or tomatoes on the shelf is worth a bushel rotting on the ground.

See that the shelves in your preserving closet are just a little this year.

Weeding will seem easy next winter when mother serves those home-canned string beans.

Fashions of To-Day - By May Manton

9425 Child's Dress, 4 to 8 years. Price 10 cents.

THERE is something very dainty and attractive about this little frock, yet it is absolutely simple withal. There is just the straight skirt that is hemmed and tucked and gathered, but the pretty little bodice that is cut in points gives a very novel touch. The ribbon that is passed through slits at the waist line hints of the Empire and always the Empire line is becoming to the little girls. If you prefer you can make long sleeves, but most mothers and most children will like the short ones for the present season.

For the 6-year size will be needed, $2\frac{3}{4}$ yards of material 36 inches wide.

The pattern No. 9425 is cut in sizes from 4 to 8 years. It will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper, on receipt of ten cents.

Bringing Up Father

"I can, and I will," said the surgeon promptly.

Three days after the wholesale arrest at the dam, Brewster gossip had fairly outworn itself telling and retelling the story of how the High Line charter had been saved; of how Crawford Stanton's bold ruse of hiring an ex-train robber to impersonate a federal court officer had fallen through leaving Stanton and his confederates, ruthlessly abandoned by the unnamed principals, languishing ballies in jail; or how Smith, the hero of all these occasions, was still lying at the point of death in the office shack at the construction camp and David Kinzie, once more in keed pursuit of the loaves and fishes, was combing the market for odd shares of the stock, which was now climbing swiftly out of reach. But at this climax of exhaustion—or safety—came a distinctly new set of thrills, more titillating, if possible, than all the others combined.

It was on the morning of the third day that the Herald announced the return of Mr. Joseph Richlander from the Topaz; and in the marriage notices of the same issue the breakfast table readers of the newspapers learned that the multimillionaire's daughter had been privately married the previous evening to Mr. Tucker Jibbey. Two mining speculators were chuckling over the news in the Hophra House grill when a third man came in to join them.

"What's the joke?" queried the newcomer; and when he was shown the marriage item, he nodded gravely. "That's all right; but the Herald man didn't get the full flavor of it. It was a sort of running match, it seems; the fond parent wasn't invited or consulted."

"I don't see that the fond parent has any kick coming," said the one who had sold Jibbey a promising prospect hole on Topaz mountain two days earlier. "The young fellow's got all kinds of money."

Uncle Sam's Thrift Thought For To-day

What are you going to do with that half bottle of left-over milk in your refrigerator, Madam Housewife?

The cream has been taken off but there is a good food value in what is left.

Here is one possibility, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, for a nourishing dish for either luncheon or supper.

Nourishing Milk Gravy

(Enough for family of two adults and three children. Recipe proportions if for smaller number.)

- 1 pint skin milk.
- $\frac{3}{4}$ cup flour.
- 2 teaspoons butter or cooking fat.
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt.

Melt butter or other fat in saucepan. Add flour and salt mixed. Blend. Add milk gradually. Heat, stirring constantly until thick.

Flavor, if desired, with any left-over minced meat or fish which may be on hand, or minced ham or a slice of broiled bacon, crumbled.

Serve on boiled hominy, samp, rice, potatoes, macaroni, or slices of corn or other bread, or toast.

Books and Magazines

"Pros and Cons of the Great War."

by Leonard Magnus, which E. P. Dutton & Co. have recently published in the form of a compact book with the greatest conciseness of statement the arguments for and against the various incidents, phases and developments, and the conflict. The author describes it as "a compilation of opinions" and says that the arguments "are stated primarily from the foreign point of view." The material has been drawn in the main from German and other foreign sources, with occasional reference to official documents, and the book is dedicated "To the Enemy," with a text from II Samuel, "Thy mouth hath testified against thee."

"Yes, it is a fact that without any form of control it is possible that we may be bare of breadstuffs in the latter part of next year," says Herbert Hoover.

"Without regulation," says Alfred W. McCann, food expert, in his book, "Thirty-cent Bread," published by the George H. Doran Company, "we shall have bread crabs and soup kitchens within a year."

"Great minds think alike sometimes. Is the inverse true? And, if so, does it account for the log-jam of food (and all other) legislation in Congress to-day?"

The plot and characters of Mr. Phillipott's new novel, "The Banks of Colne," published by Macmillan, are drawn from two intensely interesting industries of the Devonshire country—a great flower nursery and landscape gardening concern, and the oyster fishery on the coast.

The story develops in a leisurely way with the remarkable descriptions of nature which have characterized all Mr. Phillipott's writings. The people are real. They have grown up out of the soil on which they play out their little dramas and tragedies on the coast. All's Well That Ends Well

How One Family Moved Into the Country and What Their Neighbors Thought of It

By JANE McLEAN.

Human nature is a funny thing. Sometimes one never knows what it is one really wants until some one else voices a desire for it. Mrs. Perkins never knew that she wanted to move into the country until her life-long friend, Mrs. Starr, confessed that she was going. The Perkins family had lived next door to the Starrs for many years. Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. Starr were fast friends, the children had grown up together, family problems of finance had been openly discussed between them, and now the Starrs had amassed enough money to take a house in the suburbs.

It wasn't exactly the fact that Mrs. Perkins was going to miss Mrs. Starr, for miss her she would, but it was listening to the wonderful inducements set forth by the real estate agent, and knowing that there wasn't sufficient capital in the Perkins coffers to permit of going with their neighbors.

"I shall miss you so much," Mrs. Perkins said, wiping a stray tear from her eye on the day that she saw the last of her neighbor. "Life is going to be so strange without you."

"Oh, you will be coming along out yourself before long," Mrs. Starr returned confidently. And the two women kissed, and promised to meet the next time. But Mrs. Perkins knew that it would be a long time before they could afford to buy a house in the suburbs, even on the easy payment plan.

That night she was very quiet. The children made the same hubbub that they always made at the evening meal, and Mrs. Perkins looked across at his wife understandingly, a tender look in his tired eyes.

"Guess we're going to miss them," Eh, Jennie. "But cheer up, we're all well and we have each other."

And Mrs. Perkins could not help but respond to this. She was not a selfish woman and not for the world would she have had her husband suspect that it was because they couldn't move to the suburbs, too, that she was so downcast and forlorn.

Time passed and the Starrs slowly got settled. Mrs. Perkins went out to spend the day one Saturday and took the children with her. Mr. Perkins was to come out with Mrs. Starr on the late train. The little house was all that it had promised to be. Set in a small square of garden it was small, but it had a wide veranda, and all the little modern attachments like casement windows and winding stairs that are unknown to the ordinary city apartment.

Mrs. Perkins fancied that Mrs. Starr looked a little tired as she welcomed them, but she put this down to getting settled, and after the children had run out to play the two women sat down together in the cozy living room.

"It's lovely," sighed Mrs. Perkins. "Just what I imagined it would be. Imagine having a bedroom with four windows, and this room is so sweet, the entire place is perfect. And your veranda, how I do envy you sitting out there in the evening."

Mrs. Starr smiled. "Yes, it's all lovely," she admitted, "but there are drawbacks, Jennie, that I never knew about. For one thing, the veranda has to be screened and as we did not think of that we shall have to pay for it ourselves. Then things are much higher here than they are in the city and John is tired out every night after that stuffy trip down. I don't sleep well, either; there are dogs that bark all night and chickens that begin when they leave off. Oh, it isn't all as splendid as we had thought. Of course, we won't let that worry us, but I do wish they weren't last," she said brightly.

Build Church From Old Paving Stones

East St. Louis, Ill. — The remaining $750 of a debt of $20,000 incurred by the Winstanley Baptist Church here, when it built an edifice out of discarded paving stones three years ago has been paid.

The Rev. E. W. Reeder was going to St. Louis on a street car when he saw laborers tearing the paving stones out of Broadway, in this city.

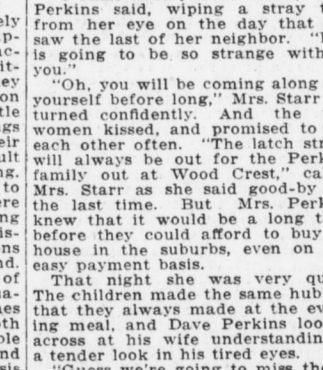

He had desired for some time to build a new church, but money was lacking. He conceived the idea of using the discarded stones. They were bought from the city for a small sum.

The new church was built by members of its congregation and Mr. Reeder. The latter, however, directed the work. It required eight months to complete the structure. The site and the building cost a total of $8,000.

Dangerous Gas and Acids That Hurt the Stomach—Sour the Food Cause Dyspepsia, Indigestion

Many stomach sufferers who are always full of gas and whose stomachs burn with acid after nearly every meal think these things are the RESULT of indigestion when in reality they are the CAUSE. It is just as foolish to give artificial digestants such as pepsin, etc., to a stomach full of gas and acid as it would be for a man who had stepped on a tack to rub limiment on his foot without removing the tack.

Some stomachs generate too much gas and acid. Gas distends the stomach walls causing a full, bloated oppressive feeling while the acid irritates and inflames the lining of the stomach. Naturally the food ferments and sour, digestion is often delayed and stomach misery is the result. Artificial digestants will push this sour, fermenting mass into the intestines and so relieve the stomach pain but the acid still remains in the stomach to generate more gas and produce more trouble at the next meal.

If you are using digestive aids after meals drop them for a while and instead get a few 5-grain tablets of pure bisulphated magnesia from Geo. A. Gorges or any druggist and take two with each meal. Bisulphated Magnesia does not digest food but will neutralize the excessive acid in your stomach, keep the food sweet and will drive the gas and bloot right out of your body. As Magnesia is prepared in various forms be sure to get Bisulphated Magnesia for this purpose as it is not a laxative and in this refined form will not injure the stomach in any way.
