

HARRISBURGER THINKS PARIS GREAT CITY

beautiful old chateaux and wonderful scenery, a German prison camp, factories, etc., until we came to Bordeaux, which is about a five-hour trip up the Garonne.

Great Sight

"After having our baggage inspected and fixing things up on the boat we landed in Bordeaux and were taken in busses to the railroad station. It certainly was a sight to see that crowd of fellows inside, on top, on behind and every place, yelling and waving an American flag going through the streets. I suppose the French people thought we were crazy, but they all waved to us and seemed glad to see us. At the station I sent a cablegram to you which I hope you got. We were all given a light lunch also at the station. While we were waiting for our train a whole trainload of French soldiers just from the front got off and we talked to them for awhile. They told us all about how they killed Boches in the trenches, etc. It was blood-curdling, but very interesting. At 10.30 we left Bordeaux for Paris.

"We were taken into third-class cars which open on the side, and were pulled by a funny dinky little engine. There were seven of us in a compartment and we sat all night as there were no beds and no room to lie down. It was bright moonlight and we looked at the country, which is very beautiful and picturesque. We landed in Paris about 9 o'clock in the morning and were taken in taxicabs to "1 Rue Raynouard". The place is a huge old house with immense grounds, given by the Comtesse of Villatreuse for the use of the American Ambulance. It was built about 1749, and is where Ben Franklin stayed when he was in Paris. Of course, the place is run down now, but it was once beautiful and has all kinds of huge, massive stone cellars, gardens, terrace, a little woods with huge shady trees, springs, etc. They have built barracks and things for us to sleep in all over the grounds and now I am comfortably fixed in one with about forty other fellows.

See Paris

"We arrived Tuesday morning and since then Hen and I, along with Walter Hall, a young professor from Princeton, and some other fellows, have been seeing Paris. I forgot to say that we are in Passy, a very fashionable suburb of Paris, right along the Seine river and near the Eiffel Tower.

"The only signs of war you see are the numerous soldiers of every description on the streets, the signs of mourning and, of course, military trucks, etc. Aeroplanes are humming over Paris all the time, the Paris guard. But everything seems plentiful and all the places seem to be going just the same as if it were peacetime. Of course, at night all the streets are darkened for fear of raids.

"There have been so many fellows coming over for ambulance work that they have to put some to driving ammunition trucks, caissons they call it, at the front. Fortunately I got into the ambulance service, as they use all the bigger men for the former. We will be sent somewhere near the front for a period of training before we go into active service. I suppose that will be next week sometime.

Visits Historical Buildings

"Henry and I have been going around seeing the sights of Paris and by this time I can find my way around pretty well. Paris certainly is a beautiful city. We went to see the Louvre, which is a huge old building, built and added to by any number of kings. Standing at the Louvre you look past the Tuilleries, i. e., the palace of Louis XVI, through the Carrousel Arch built by Napoleon, a triumphal arch, on through to Place de la Concorde, where a huge obelisk is situated; Cleopatra's Needle, it is called. Stretching out beyond is the Champs Elysees, a beautiful broad avenue lined with parks and trees. This leads up to the huge triumphal arch of Napoleon, situated at Etoile, called so because a bunch of streets meet there. If you stand at the Place de la Concorde you see all this. Turning half way around you see at one end the beautiful old Greek temple effect Church of the Madeleine. Looking the other way you see the Chamber of Deputies across the Pont Neuf. We also saw Notre Dame, the Invalides, tomb of Napoleon, the Eiffel tower and a whole swarm of other famous places. Besides that, we've traveled all over the city, seeing the different parts of it. The Rue de Rivoli, where all the little shops are; Foubourg St. Germain, the business section; some beautiful residence sections; the Isle de la Cite, the original place where Paris was started, and numerous other places.

Buffalo Nickels Valuable

"Henry and I knew a boy from Princeton who lives over here and he invited us to a fair at St. Sulpice, where we met Miss Sharp, the Ambassador's daughter, and some very nice French girls who are of the most exclusive society in Paris, but as their English was as bad as my French a conversation wasn't too potent. But they were tickled to death at a Buffalo nickel I gave one as a souvenir. In fact all Paris is crazy to get one. Give one to anybody and you can get almost anything. I have only two left, doggone it.

"Last night Raymond Harper invited us to his house to dinner and we had a very nice time. I met his sister and mother, who are charming. "The Paris subways have New York's beat by a mile. They are clean, comfortable and the air is good. They run often and everywhere; there are three classes; the first costs a nickel and you can go anywhere in Paris for it. Fine, comfortable leather seats in clean, white and really handsome cars. "Americans seem to be well liked and are popular in Paris. I guess France is expecting great things from U. S. It certainly does look wonderful to see all the French, English, Italians and all the allied uniforms parading up and down the streets, etc. The whole thing is an experience which I never will forget and am sorry you cannot see for yourselves. Write often and give me all the news. Lots of love to all. "FRANKLIN."

Even Daschunds Change Their German "Handles"

Chicago, July 12 — There are no more "Kaisers" among the dog population of Chicago, according to City Clerk Ison, who says that since the declaration of war between the United States and Germany the owners of the former "Kaisers" have been selecting new names for their pets. "Bismarck" is also being forgotten, he said. "There is not a single one of the 'Kaisers' and 'Bismarcks,' this year of a multitude registered by daschund owners in previous years," said the City Clerk yesterday. "Among the popular owners' names for canines are Bingo, Snooker, Cupid, Gus and Pennut. Many also are naming their dogs after distinguished Americans."
