PUDDLERS WANT $10.25 PER TON

Strike of Employes Completely Shuts Down Duncannon Iron and Steel Plant

Duncannon, Pa., July 24.—Every branch of the Duncannon mills of the Lebanon Iron and Steel Company is still closed down because of the strike that was called one week ago.

At that time the men demanded higher wages and went out almost to a man, entirely tying up every department of the works.

Although the men at the local mill had frequent increases, they say they are still paid less than men in other cities. The puddlers demand $10.25 per ton, bringing their own wages scale on a level with that paid in the large iron cities of the country.

Company officials reply that they are unable to meet the prices paid in larger cities and that the scale of living in a small town does not necessitate the same wages.

It is said the officials of the company have given the men until today to reconsider their demands and if they do not do so the works will be shut down permanently.

The men refuse to alter their demands or to return to work.

The starting of the local mills by the Lebanon people some years ago put Duncannon on the map at that time. Prior to the start of the iron mills part of the town compared with a genuine deserted village.

Grass was growing in places that for many years had never known anything but the busy hum of machinery.

The section of the town formerly occupied by the mill workers was becoming a desolated ruin.

The Lebanon people put everything in good shape when they purchased the mills. Men who had never known any other occupation than the making of iron were again given an opportunity to work at home.

Since that time several minor strikes have occurred, but they have never settled on the satisfaction of both parties.
