NURSERY HOME'S BUGLER IS OUT

Collecting Bags Full of Waste For the Nursery Home All Over the City

Beginning this morning collectors started out to gather in the bags, full of waste for the Nursery Home which will sell the stuff to augment their funds.

The merry sound of the bugle brought the housewife to the door, and beside bags of rags, rubber and the like, there were many articles too large to go inside, but which will bring many a penny to the good cause.

The Nursery Home is benefitting children from all parts of Dauphin county and from fifty to sixty youngsters are cared for daily, ranging in age from wee babies to the larger 10-year-olds.

In every household there is an accumulation of old things which can be turned to good account by donating it to the home. Rags of all kinds, old flannel, everything woolen, carpets and rugs as well as rubber of every description, brass, lead, iron, zinc, old cooking utensils, everything but paper and magazines.

The donations will be sold in one big lot and the proceeds will help care for many children.

PICKING ARMY OF SUPERMEN

British Officer Says U. S. Is Making Mistake in Physical Requirements

Philadelphia, Aug. 6. — "Those in charge of the selective draft for the United States Army are making a mistake in their physical examinations. They are virtually selecting an army of supermen. The ration of exemption is much too high. They will be obliged to make a second combing of those that are being rejected."

This is the criticism of a British officer commissioned by his Government to recruit British subjects living in this country. What he said was endorsed by a British surgeon with the rank of first lieutenant, who has had numerous opportunities of comparing British and French physical examinations with the rejections made by American surgeons connected with the draft boards.

"The American selective draft," said the British surgeon, and for obvious reasons he must remain incognito, "is eliminating all but super-soldiers. Teeth must be perfect, vision of both eyes normal, all the limbs and their parts must be without blemish or blemish. In short, something close to physical perfection must be registered."

Too Many Exemptions "As a consequence of this hyper-critical examination, you are getting only about one of every two young men suitable for military service. The exemptions rise higher than 50 per cent. When you come to take other things into consideration and other causes, out of the number of those who passed the physical examination you will find sections with a scanty one out of every ten, or perhaps one out of every ten. The consequence will be that in order to get an army of 1,000,000 or 2,000,000, you will be obliged to sift and reject your ranks. Every repetition of the physical process will be costly and unnecessary."

It will have been much better had the British army taken them as well as the chaps with two keen eyes. Then there is the question of slight injuries. Newfoundlander came to our headquarters to-day. He had been turned down by your army inspectors and by the inspectors of your navy because the first joint of the little finger of the left hand was missing. We examined him, found him to be otherwise in tip-top shape and promptly accepted him for the British army. He was a fine soldier in the ranks as I have seen.

We are taking men for various services up to 55 years of age. Be sure that you are not overlooking your young men because the first joint of the little finger of the left hand was missing. We examined him, found him to be otherwise in tip-top shape and promptly accepted him for the British army. He was a fine soldier in the ranks as I have seen.

I want to say most emphatically that it was not for the married men of Britain who volunteered at the beginning of the war. The Germans would have taken this long ago and probably would be in London now. Even now they are taking the British ranks are the backbone of the British army."

JOINS HAHNEMANN UNIT Miss Mabel Shiker, of 506 Calde street, a trained nurse, has registered with the nurses for the Hahnemann base hospital unit, the first homeopathic medical unit to be formed in Philadelphia for war work. Dr. Gustave A. Van Lennep is director there will be twenty-six physicians, sixty-five nurses and 165 men and women, among them prominent linguists, insurance men and educators.

Accept Them With One Good Eye "I was taken by the vision of a man with a defective tooth, or a number of teeth missing, but which he is left-handed. We have found it to be a mistake to reject in only the left eye or vice versa. These chaps can sight a gun and do all manner of soldering quite as well as the chaps with two keen eyes."
