Bugles Announce Trucks Buglers who sound the signal to place the bags where they can be picked up without delay are adding much zest to the work.

While the work is being pushed with all possible alacrity, care is being taken not to skip any house. "No one should worry, though," said Mrs. J. Hervey Patton, president of the Nursery Home.

DON CARRUTHERS STILL IN CHINA

Will Remain There Another Year; Writes of Attempt to Restore Monarchy

Donald W. Carruthers, of this city, who went to China to work under the direction of the Princeton Y. M. C. A. in the Army, has written home briefly of the recent attempt to restore the monarchy. The letter is dated Peking, July 8, and excerpts follow:

"It has been some time since I last wrote for the past few weeks we have been spending the interior where we have few opportunities for communication with the outside world. I wrote you as we went into the 'bushes' and last Sunday night I reached the city after twenty-two days walking and tramping about in some of the most delightful regions I have yet seen in China. The party was made up of four doctors, one hospital superintendent, one Red Cross nurse, one professor, one Princeton Y. M. C. A. man and I. I walked 220 miles and was in fine style when I got back, in the very best possible condition. I am writing up the trip in detail and will send a copy along to you. We visited the city of Peking as well as the press Dowager and also her tomb which cost the sum of $15,000,000 and is richly ornate. We floated down a river for 185 miles for four days and in the morning got under way at 4 a. m. which I thought was going some. The party all arrived safely and no accidents or sickness occurred to mar the trip although the weather was very trying on certain days but on the whole we enjoyed great weather. Wherever we stopped for any length of time the donkey boys told the villagers that there were doctors in the party and they brought many sick to be cured almost like they did in the New Testament and 'He healed them.'"

Attempt Revolution "By this time you will have heard all the facts of the latest thing to startle the city of Peking as well as the country at large—namely, the attempt to restore the monarchy for China by a rebel general, Chai Hsiun. One week today the old dragon flags were flung to the breeze and all felt there was to be a real return to the things of former times before the Republic had its birth. The rebel general came to Peking and took the President captive after compelling him to sign a statement giving up the office of president, he then proceeded to the palace where the Boy Emperor lives since the beginning of the Republic at an annual allowance of $4,000,000 a year and elevated him to the throne as Emperor. All the foreign residents in the city issued a statement giving up the office of consul and a revolution and general period of local disorder was certainly expected for the troops of the rebel have a bad reputation for looting when they are turned loose on a city. The Legations warned their nationals to be ready at any moment to move into the legation for more adequate protection than can be secured alone in their individual compounds. We passed some rather fearful nights but as yet nothing much has taken place and it is now rumored that the rebel has decided to abdicate from his position and to go to the office of the Republic. There is no need to worry over events for they are taking care of themselves in the most excellent manner. One thing which shows is the lack of stability and moral courage among the men of China and if they do not soon rid of the term of the 'yellow race' (Cowards) I don't see much hope for them as a world power."

You have already been advised, I imagine, that the New York office of the recent cable which came to me relative to my staying in Peking another year. The Y. M. C. A. is not sure of the summer plan. I am told, this year, and the problem of a successor might have been a difficult one. There was some chance of my going to the city of Peking, Princeton Y. M. C. A. among the British Troops or possibly to the French front.

STEWART CALLS FOR MORE DATA

Adjutant General Will Ask Captains to Explain Differences

Days may elapse before it will be possible to make revised credits for enlistments in the national guard under the draft act. The Adjutant General's department to-day sent notice to captains of a number of organizations of the national guard that their returns made a short time ago containing home addresses of enlisted men for use in revision of credits were shy many men. In some instances as high as thirty men were not accounted for and in others as low as three. There were few companies which were not affected. The figures were called for recently to correct the complaints about the credits allowed for national guardmen. It being claimed that the cities were getting more than their share because they were returned as home stations. The adjutant general few days ago issued addresses to apportion the credits between cities and counties. The latest reports show shortages of men. This is said to be due to the expiration of enlistments or rejection after physical examinations, but the adjutant general wants definite statements as to reasons. The revised figures will materially affect the draft quotas, it is now believed.

Credit Where Credit Is Due To say that "Business is good in Harrisburg" is to state, very modestly, a fact in evidence on every hand. To say that "Business is growing better in Harrisburg" is to speak an unassailable truth. But to say that "Business couldn't be better in Harrisburg" is to give the lie to the ambition and enterprise of as live a lot of business men as the nation boasts. THE HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH has a word or two of commendation to record in honor of the State Capital's men of business affairs who are the pacemakers of progress. They are men of vision. They see in swelling pay rolls and armies of newcomers the stuff and stamina by virtue of which cities grow into metropolitan strength and independence. Their expanding stocks and increasing use of advertising space tell of their unbounded confidence in increasingly good times just ahead. Expecting big things, they attempt big things. It should be the pride of the city, from end to end, to back them up. So pay particular attention these days, you who are readers of THE TELEGRAPH, to the midsummer messages of the advertising columns. YOUR ATTENTION TO-DAY WILL PAY
