

DORSETT TELLS BUREAU'S AIMS

Chief of Market Division Talks About the Plans to Extend Its Usefulness

E. B. Dorsett, director of the new State Bureau of Markets, in outlining his plans says: "Congress is wrestling with the problem of food control. With an economic system of food distribution inaugurated, control would not be necessary. Under present systems too much waste, time and expense is incurred in getting food products from the farm to the ultimate consumer. Any act of Congress that merely fixes a minimum price will not remedy this condition. What is most needed is a system of marketing that shall keep the stream of food products flowing toward the city markets at an even rate. There is a vast difference between hoarding for profit and storing for time of need. With a system of marketing that involves warehouses and places of storage, food products could be safely kept until needed, thereby preventing the speculation that we see on every hand to-day. Once the food products have left the farm they become the prey of food sharks and gamblers, but if kept on the farm or by an organization of farmers, gambling and speculation would in a large degree, be prohibited. "The Bureau of Markets will attempt to inaugurate a system that will consider some of these important factors in marketing food products. It is the purpose of the bureau to get in close touch with market centers and insofar as possible, regulate the stream of food products in such a way that the stream will not be clogged at its mouth. We have been promised the support of the big transportation companies and expect to get some helpful suggestions from them by way of keeping the bureau informed as to the movement of farm crops. "We hope to be able, within the next few weeks or months at the most, to give information to any shipper that shall be a guide to him as to the best time and place of shipment. The bureau might properly be called a bureau of information, because that will be its chief aim for the present. We expect to keep in close touch with crop and market conditions and be able to tell the farmer where and when to ship, and the distributor where to buy. It is the purpose of the bureau to antagonize any interest, but simply to render such assistance as it may be able at such times and in places as seem advisable. "We will greatly appreciate any assistance that may be rendered, either by the producer or the distributor, to the end that all food products may reach the consumer with the least possible expense and within the shortest possible time."

PERSHING WANTS THINKING MEN

American Commander Says Soldiers Should Not Be Automatic

Paris, Aug. 8.—Major General Pershing, commander of the American expedition in France, told the Associated Press to-day it was highly essential that the men in America's conscript army should be in excellent physical condition, well-disciplined and capable of individual action. He added that the army organization must be built from the bottom up, each man and officer devoting all his energies to the work. The General said: "Our men must be in good physical condition, keeping their morals clean and thereby capable of meeting the trying conditions of modern warfare. The men must learn to obey orders promptly, implicitly and willingly, but not necessarily automatically. "I object to the word 'automatic,' because we do not want a machine-made organization, but an army of thinking men, men with individuality, men who are capable and ready to assume command of units should their officers be killed or incapacitated, as sometimes happens in trench warfare. "The men must be made to realize that war is not sport or play, but serious work, demanding the utmost energy and attention to insure success."
