

Auto Tires Sold at $500 Apiece in Sweden

American motorists should take sweet satisfaction, now that their country is involved in war, in the fact that the largest automobile tire factories in the world are located within the confines of the United States, according to Count Richard Hamilton, representing A. V. Holm, of Stockholm, who looks after the Peerless business in Sweden.

The Count was at the Peerless factory in Cleveland the other day and he said that about the most distressing feature of the motor car business in Sweden is the rubber tire shortage.

"A friend of mine," said the Count, "learned of a couple of rear tires for sale just outside of Stockholm. He hurriedly bought them, at an exorbitant price, and started home, carrying the tires on his arm. He guarded them as a bank messenger guards the money placed in his care. He had not proceeded on his way far, however, before several persons were at his heels with offers to buy the tires. The high price was made when a man offered him the equivalent of $500 in cash in American money, for each of the tires. Even at that price, the offer was not accepted."

"You Americans can thank your stars that you are in no danger of facing a rubber shortage. You have the factories here, therefore you will get the tires."

Count Hamilton also mentioned the fact that among the more prominent Peerless owners in Sweden is Asta Nilsson, the moving picture favorite of that country. He had recently completed a trip of 168 miles with her in eight hours, with the Peerless Eight running on low gear through the deep snow in and around Stockholm.

CRITICIZE CONTROLLER
Members of the Workmen's Non-Partisan League at a meeting last night, passed resolutions censuring City Controller DeWitt A. Fry in creating a condition, that if he is elected to City Council, a vacancy will exist in his office, which the Commissioners will have to fill, instead of electing the voters an opportunity to elect a successor. The resolutions asked Fry either to resign or drop out of the race.

Mr. Coal Consumer:
Have you laid in your supply for next winter?
Or rather have you engaged your supply from your dealer?
Coal dealers have hundreds of unfilled orders on their books and are patiently, or we should say, impatiently waiting for coal to fill them.
Since it is difficult for the dealer to secure an adequate amount of coal during July and August, how can he take care of the demand in January and February?
At the present time it is practically impossible to get certain sizes and grades of coal.
Wholesale coal prices have been advancing each month since April 1. It will shortly be necessary to change the retail prices because of the higher cost.
You run a fearful risk in delaying the filling of your bins. Soon the coal dealer must refuse to accept new orders until the old ones are filled.

Maxwell Breaks Record in Long Canadian Run

The possibility of a motor car being used as a bearer of important war dispatches has been demonstrated in Canada by Ray McNamara, road engineer for the Maxwell Motor Company, Inc., of Detroit, while he was using a Maxwell touring car to make a patch for Canadian motorists.

McNamara established a record without a parallel in the history of Canadian motordom. He covered the 275 miles from Windsor to Toronto in six hours and fifty minutes of actual running time. The elapsed time was seven hours and forty-four minutes.

Heavy rains over seventy miles of the course made the roads nearly impassable. Traveling of any kind was difficult.

"Putting things mildly this trip was about the nearest thing to aeroplaning that I have ever experienced," wired the road engineer to the Maxwell Company.

The trip from Windsor to Toronto was better by two hours than the unofficial record.

So well had the Maxwell car performed that McNamara and the two passengers carried with him were compelled to wait for the newspapermen and Maxwell dealer to appear on the ground. The trail blazer arrived in Toronto sixteen minutes ahead of schedule time.

The record-breaking time of the Maxwell was accomplished, although time was lost on two occasions by tires being changed and dirt settling in the gasoline line, which was cleaned three times.

In the first hour of travel after leaving Windsor the night of July 26 the Maxwell made 41.5 miles. Beyond that point the motorist found the roadway badly cut up and very rough. After going sixty miles McNamara changed the right tire which had a four-inch cut, caused by the sharp rocks.

The roads were water soaked for the next seventy miles. The surface had been washed off, leaving the sharp bed rock exposed. A second tire went to pieces at the end of 150 miles.

After leaving Hamilton it was necessary to slow down to twenty-five miles an hour speed on the highway. Going over the rough roads about forty-five miles an hour had been made.

The slow time on the boulevard was to remain within the speed limit, and to avoid being trapped hidden in bushes alongside the roadway.

Before quitting Canada McNamara will lose a route to Montreal and other places.

Accompanying McNamara in the Maxwell touring car were A. Drake, of the Windsor Record; W. E. Addyman, traffic manager; W. B. Hastings, of the Canadian Motorist, represented the Toronto newspapers and checked the car in at Toronto.

He was secretary and treasurer of the Wrightsville Iron Company organized in 1866, and in 1872 he went to Virginia where he was a partner in the firm of Cook & Co. He was an extensive land owner in Virginia and affiliated with all the leading industries of this section. He was a charter member of the Masons and member of the Presbyterian church. ## WHO IS AFRAID TO BE GOOD?

Are You Willing to Sacrifice Your Principles For Fear of Someone's Ridicule?

By Beatrice Fairfax
Deep within us—so deep that we often fail to realize it—is a respect and goodness. And on the surface of our knowledge there is a suspicion that it actually "pays" to be good.

And yet some of us are actually afraid to try it out! Human nature is pathetically afraid of ridicule. A good many of us would die for a principle, but we won't be laughed at for it.

Haven't you ever been in a situation very much like this? Mabel is lunching with a group of brilliant society people whose worldliness she does not exactly admire, but still rather envies. All of them take cocktails before their dinner, and wine with it and liquors afterward. Mabel has a definite principle about drink. She doesn't approve of it; she suspects it of evil effects, and besides her moral scruples she thinks it looks rather badly for a young woman to drink in public.

When asked to "join the crowd in a drink" she is terrified at the thought of seeming critical; she doesn't want to take a "holier than thou" attitude; she hates the thought of seeming to preach. So she ventures a timid: "Honestly I don't care for cocktails."

"Have you ever tried one?" asked Mrs. Antrim.

"No," Mabel confesses her ignorance shamefacedly—not proudly.

"Then how do you know you don't like it?"

Mabel finds the logic of that irrefutable. The cocktail is ordered. She drinks it. Then she can think of no particularly good excuse about the wine or the liquors.

Mabel is afraid that she will be thought "goody-goody." And so she dare not be true to her real self.

Apart from the right or wrong of drinking, Mabel committed a real sin. She violated her own principles. She betrayed her own soul. She was not honest because she was "afraid to be good."

Have you ever found yourself in a similar position? Think about it a moment. Are you very proud now of the way you conducted yourself?

Not very long ago a party of young people were dining in a restaurant where there was good music with the meals, but dancing as well. A young man whom I know well related the story afterward.

His attitude is fairly representative of that of any other decent young fellow. Think it over, girls.

One of the guests was little Miss E.—from Boston. When the first fox-trot struck her, she danced with him. "I'm sorry—but I don't dance in public. It just happened that my father doesn't approve. You won't mind if I leave the dance which I'd honestly enjoy and have the satisfaction of living up to my father's ideal of me?" asked the girl earnestly.

"And by jove, I like that little girl. I think her father's rather an old fogey, and I'd hate it if many chaps were so strict with their daughters. But I think it was pretty decent of her to take a chance on having us laugh at her for wanting to mind her dad."

"That was my friend's comment. 'And did you laugh?' I asked.

"Not one of us. We were so busy thinking how brave she was to risk having us all ridicule her that we would have been might, ashamed to do it. She's a peach of a girl; and say, when Norton Jones got up a dance in his studio for her the next week, she turned out to be a wonderful dancer—waltzes like a dream. A lot of the girls have been giving parties in their homes, and it's sort of fun to stay home for a change."

If you have a conviction or a principle or a feeling that you owe it to someone you love to act in a certain way; why be so cowardly to live up to your own ideal? Everybody admires bravery. Almost everybody knows how hard it is to take a stand which is different from other people's.

If you are on the unpopular side of the question and are ugly and aggressive about it, of course you make enemies. But if you stand in a lonely minority and sweetly and amiably back your own principles without demanding that anybody else reform to suit you or act in accordance with your conduct, you are pretty likely to make converts.

Converts to the honesty and sweetness and simplicity that is not "afraid to be good."

New Device Makes It Safer to Learn Driving

Several months of successful operation of a double steering wheel car by Bishop, McCormick & Bishop, of Brooklyn, have supplied the comforting assurance that a day is coming when every motorist will learn the art of driving with much greater safety to themselves, to other motorists, and to the general public.

The double steering wheel device permits the instructor to retain control over the car at all times, even though the pupil is doing the actual driving and gear shifting. This arrangement enables the pupil to try his hand almost immediately on traffic-ridden streets, with the result that he is far better equipped to drive alone after one or two lessons than the average "raw motorist" is after three or four. The instructor car is not only equipped with two steering wheels but with two sets of brake and clutch pedals. Automobile Topics' says, "Because of this arrangement both instructor and learner feel a confidence that cannot exist when there is a single control in unskilled hands. The nervous strain that is eliminated can best be appreciated by those who have been through the experience."

The Brooklyn firm precedes this instruction by a series of lessons in an "anchored car," which is set on a platform such a way as to leave the wheels free. In front of the car is a semaphore with which the instructor flashes signals to the driver. "Sharp turn," "steep hill," etc., direct the pupil to manipulate his controls accordingly, while a special brake lever enables the instructor to produce practically the same conditions as would result on the road. Both the dual control and the anchored car were originated by Bishop, McCormick & Bishop, and patents are applied for on each. Bishop, McCormick & Bishop are the Dodge Brothers dealers in Brooklyn.
