LETTERS FROM THE FRONT

MEADE D. DETWEILER GIVES VIVID DESCRIPTION OF AIR RAID

Meade D. Detweiler, son of Mrs. Meade D. Detweiler, of this city, who has been in the ambulance service in France since early this summer, in a letter to his mother vividly describes the recent air raid on Paris. He says the din caused by the sounding of the "aid alarm" reminded him of Harrisburg on New Year's eve.

American Ambulance Hospital of Paris. Nevelly-Sur-Seine, France, August 7, 1917.

Mother Dearest:—A friend of mine who is one of the five fellows in our room is leaving Saturday for the U. S. A. We will indeed be sorry to see him go, for we have spent many happy though sad moments together in our work.

I must tell you of the air raid and how the Paris aviators drove the German raiders away. It was a great experience. It was a fine evening and in the warm air Parisians walked quietly home from the theater, etc. In the clear summer sky the stars were brilliant and bright. It was a peaceful time. Suddenly the sound of the siren, the well-known sound of the "aid alarm" also known as the "strident voice of sirens." It was the signal of an air raid menace on the capital and the speedy order to get into the shelters in less than ten minutes had advised the whole population of the possible danger. Little by little the lights were turned out and the streets were put in darkness. There was no excitement among the population but the alarm met with "natural" interest.

Searchlights cut the sky in every direction, seeking for the German air machines that had been announced. Quietly sitting on the ground, the people were discussing how long it takes a German aircraft to come from their lines to Paris; how many of them are shot down; what speed are they running at? What do they carry? And to all these questions if one has a sense of humor at all, even in trying to answer these, the nonexpert theorists applied quite unexpected answers.

Everybody here should be satisfied with the assurance that the aerial strength of the "aid" established, even during the night, that the military authorities are warned of the number of hostile machines within a few minutes of their appearance in the lines and the types represented. Even their most speedy aeroplanes can not escape our keen-sighted watchers.

Like New Year's Eve

I was awakened about 12 o'clock to hear the noises in the streets like "New Year's Eve" in Harrisburg. The men in the buildings were extinguished all the lights and dressed and we all rushed to the hospital, where we started our machines and awaited orders to go to the front. I had never executed any hospital in Paris, consequently we were ordered to different posts. I was ordered to a small hospital in the Bois, and stayed there until the raid was over.

The sky, as I said before, was full of machines and it was a wonderful sight to behold. The noise was so high you would be unable to see them. They only came within twenty miles of Paris and did not get very close. We fought them, but the night's alarm proved how perfect is our defensive system.

Food is Restricted

It is now, as you have seen by the papers, that Germany gets all the canned foodstuffs we send to her, and she in return must give out food. Until we stop shipping to her, we are called "neutral countries." Germany will get this food. You cannot realize what it all means until you get over here and see for you see nothing in the States. I have been very busy, but oh, how damp and cool the climate is here.

Lafayette Squadrilla Cited in Army Orders For Great Courage

Grand Headquarters of the French Army, Thursday, Aug. 25.—The Lafayette squadrilla, composed of American airmen, enlisted in the French aerial service, was cited in army orders to-day for its courage and spirit of sacrifice. The citation, which is signed by General Petain, commander-in-chief of the French army operating on the French front, follows:

"The squadrilla, composed of American volunteers, who have come to fight for France in the pure spirit of sacrifice, has fought incessantly under the command of Captain Georges Thénault, who formed it for an ardent fight against our enemies. In very severe combats it has paid the price of serious losses, which, far from weakening, have increased its morale.

"The squadrilla has brought down twenty-eight enemy aeroplanes. It has aroused the profound admiration of commanders, who have had it under their orders, and also of French squadrillas which are fighting beside it, and have desired to rival it in valor."

FIGHT FOR YOUR LIFE

Duty Demands Robust Health

Fight to get it and keep it

Fight—fight day in and day out to prevent being overtaken by ill health. Keep wrinkles from marring the cheek and the body from losing its youthful appearance and buoyancy. Fight when ill-health is coming with its pain, dizziness, defect and declining powers. Fight to stay its course and drive it off.

Don't fight intelligently. Don't fight without the intelligent use of effective weapons. The pale, greasy and weakness growing in times becomes a prey to ill after all.

You will not find this class of people in the hypochondriacal, drooping persons in that line. It is a hale, hearty, robust aggregation of quick-steppers who view life in a joyous frame of mind, and are men and women of equal to any emergency. Hypochondriacs stand for sound body and sound mind—it is the invigorating and health-preserving. Fight to hold the vigor of a sound body and mind.

This is the most wonderful place I have ever been—something new to see every day; and if I had the time I should like to see it all, but it is not possible now.

I have been in the "Invalids," seen "Napoleon's Tomb" which is perfectly beautiful, and the most impressive sight for the wonderful shade of that blue light cast all around, with the lovely gold altar in the rear, gives a tone of reverence that no human being could ever forget. The stained glass windows at San Chapelle are the finest I have ever seen, and the Peri Lachais should be noted, is simply filled with wonderful monuments.

I was glad to hear you received my "steamer log" and the rest will come along in file, for I have written twice as much as I can carry. I hope you receive the papers soon and it is a happy day when I get news. I see the Philadelphia papers once in a while and get very busy.

I must run along now. Keep well and give my best to all inquiring friends.

adult workers, men who stand ready at the call of their country to drop their present occupation and fill the place of those who have been called to greater service in war emergency work. From this reserve will be drawn men as needed by the government for the production of war material, work essentially connected with the war.

Be Prepared

No, not any kind of knowledge! Practical, usable knowledge is power

Any other is excess baggage! A thorough commercial education gives power in the business world and in social relations.

The most important thing that the young man or young woman can consider is the matter of preparation for years that are to come—for making a living and for accumulating a little surplus for the benefit of others.
