MEETS THE POET EDWIN MARKHAM

Miss Lois Kamerlin Booker, of 536 Maclay street, a successful teacher in the city schools is just home from her vacation spent in New York city, where she completed a summer course in Columbia University.

Her work in literature included an "Advanced Course in Story Telling," of which program making and giving was a feature. By request she told an original story at the annual reunion given by the Pennsylvania students who numbered over two hundred this season.

In an interview last evening, Miss Booker said: "An afternoon at the home of the great Social American Poet, Edwin Markham, was a memorable event. Dr. Martha Poote Crow, Advisor for Poetry, in the National Association of Women's Clubs extended the invitation."

"The home of the Markhams is a cozy cottage in the shelter of fine old trees on Staten Island. With the Markhams, who are but three, ten thousand volumes lining the walls, she also extended greetings. A genuine home feeling prevailed the place, due to Mrs. Markham's natural gift of hospitality.

"She introduced the great poet with real pleasure. His face was radiant with love for the world, as he talked of the need of 'Soul Culture' in the education of the child, and read beautiful sonnets, recently composed, from a big, black, leather book.

"Then," she said, "his kindly penetrating brown eyes took first as he denounced the land monopoly in Russia. 'Would you like to hear my poem, 'Russia Arise'?' he inquired. 'France, in the year 1871, ago in the streets of Petrograd by Ivan Irodin, and roused such feelings of insurrection that he was imprisoned for fifteen months.

"Has Wonderful Voice "Giving himself up to the mastery of his own thought, the poet shared his vision in eloquent look, voice and manner. His voice was clear and musical, as the revolutionary feeling grew stronger, his tones deepened in sonorous, rhythmic quality, until the listeners themselves were roused to a high state of feeling by the prophetic challenging voice of an American."

Miss Booker says the great poet was pleased as a child at the appreciation of the conversation with quiet appreciation expressed, and inter-humor and gallantry.

He also gave the inspired poem, "France, in the year 1871," that he was called to Washington in 1871, before the French War Commission.

As he waved farewell to his guests, Edwin Markham left the vision of a living reality of Rodin's sculpturing, and even in these ominous days of war, their thought brightened through his "unquenched faith," the ultimate triumph of civilization.

COMMANDER OF PENNSYLVANIA DIVISION OF NATIONAL GUARD

Major-General Charles M. Clement, Typical Soldier of American Army and Remarkable Military Genius, With Forty Years of Service

Sunbury, Pa., Aug. 25.—Major-General Charles M. Clement, commander of the Twenty-eighth Division, Pennsylvania National Guard of the United States, who is now at Camp Hancock, Ga., directing the movements of the State troops at Cantonment, is one of the few men who have risen from the ranks to the highest military honor within the gift of his Commonwealth.

MAJ. GEN. CHAR. M. CLEMENT

Besides being the big man of the State's unit in the National Army, General Clement is big in other ways. He stands six feet tall in his stocking feet, weighs 194 pounds and has the carriage and appearance of the true soldier. He gets his love of a soldier's life from his father, General John Kay Clement, and a long line of fighting ancestors, whose deeds of valor date back to Colonial days. In 1877 "Charlie" Clement, then a young lawyer, wanted a company of the National Guard of Pennsylvania in Sunbury. Others were interested, and before the borough got through rubbing its eyes, Company E, of the famous old Two Hundred and Twentieth Regiment was organized. Clement enlisted as a private. He was assigned to duty, studious of military tactics and the appearance of the noncommissioned officers to first lieutenant. Then came a vacation in the captivity.
