Negro Living Near Pen Mar Has Great Collection of "Pet" Reptiles at Home

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 29.—A negro by the name of James Johnson, living near Pen Mar, exhibited a large blue racer snake, which he held a captive in a drugstore here recently. The reptile was over five feet in length and especially good-looking for a snake.

This man makes his living by catching snakes of all kinds—his specialty being rattlesnakes. His collection is unique for its simplicity, but dangerous to an inexperienced hand. Johnson locates the object of his search and crawls up to it on hands and knees, never for an instant taking his eyes from those of the reptile. Second Division of Cumberland County Has More Men on List Than Required

Carlisle, Pa., Aug. 29.—The quota for District No. 2 to the national army has been more than reached, following the latest action of the board. In District No. 1, however, where a more lenient stand is being taken on exemptions, but half of the desired number has been secured and more men have been called for examination, beginning on Thursday.

The No. 2 board has announced that it had refused to exempt any man who had no children and whose wife was not an invalid but who was physically able to support herself. In view of the President's recent ruling, however, it is possible that the district board will reverse a number of decisions on this point and should such be the case a larger number will have to be examined.

In District No. 2 the quota is 75. So far if those members who are physically able to support themselves, the board has passed 80 have been certified for service, 59 were rejected on physical grounds, 101 exempted and 11 are ready in service. The board certified absent men in this total and referred no agrivalt or industrial claims to the higher board.

In No. 1 district, where the needed number is 84, 60 have been certified for service, including absent men, 61 rejected on physical grounds, 74 exempted for dependency, 9 are in service and 16 have had their claims referred to the higher board.

What makes beauty? Long ago—when the world was more than two thousand years younger than it is today—a group of designers, engineers and workers created a wonderful building. It was an evolution—yet something new under the sun. The building industry was then in its infancy. It had few bad precedents. Men had not made many great structures. But the enthusiasm to create was there. The time was ripe. And the most beautiful building the world has ever seen came into existence. The Parthenon of Athens was the product of the creative enthusiasm of the age. In this day of the automobile—while the industry is yet young—another group of designers, engineers and workers have created a new thing under the sun. It is a new Packard—an evolution, and an achievement! And we honestly feel that the same spirit which made the Parthenon the model and despair of builders for all time, has gone into the making of this, the most beautiful Packard.
