BOYS SCOUTS TO WEAR BADGES OF RANK

Emblems Will Be Shown So That Boys May Be Recognized in Case of Need

In order that the Boy Scouts of America may be readily discovered and recognized at any time in case of an emergency, it has been decided, for the period of the present campaign, at least, to require all scouts to wear their badges of rank at all times, either on the coat or shirt, still better wear a metal badge of rank on the front of the hat, as has been the practice among the English Scouts since the date of their organization.

The tenderfoot pin and the new second and first-class pins will make a very effective ornament. Immediately classify the wearers, members of the Boy Scouts of America. It is believed that in addition to identifying scouts it will stimulate increased activity in scouts, especially among the boys who have been in the movement for a long time.

To Be Clean and Neat
The scout movement has been criticized in some places during the past six months, because of slovenly appearance of scouts and lack of uniformity in the styles of uniforms when appearing on the public streets for the performance of public service. While it has been the effort of the National Council to show latitude as to what parts of the uniform might be worn in different localities for special occasions, it is urged that in each community where there is a local council a very definite regulation be prescribed covering this subject and that in all places where there are no local councils the scoutmasters should definitely instruct their boys as to the proper uniform and how to wear it, according to the official handbook.

As a further aid in raising the standards of the Boy Scouts of America and improving the appearance of scouts wearing the uniform, it is recommended that a system of frequent inspection of every troop be developed and that no boy be permitted to successfully pass an examination unless his uniform is properly put on and thoroughly clean. Soap and water will not injure the Boy Scout uniform if used in accordance with the directions in our various publications. The practice of allowing boys to appear at a troop meeting or on the public thoroughfare or even in camp in a uniform which shows evidence of uncleanness is not conducive to the best training of the boy or helpful to the reputation of the Boy Scouts of America and is a direct violation of the Scout Law with reference to cleanliness.

Troop 7 Will Be Put Under Vigorous Course of Scout Training

Troop 7 of the Harris Street Evangelical church resumes its regular meetings to-night under the leadership of Scoutmaster Jerome R. Miller.
It is planned to test the boys with a number of tests, and to get a lot of first-class scouts up before the Court of Honor at an early date. Much emphasis is going to be laid upon schoolwork by Scoutmaster Miller, who believes that not only should a Scout be always up to grade in his studies but that he should be constantly kept informed of the advantages to a boy of going to high school and college, by the leaders of Scout troops.
Troop 7 expects to have not only the best troop in the city this winter, but also to possess a musical organization consisting of an orchestra of fifteen pieces, properly instrumented and under the able direction of W. L. Bailey. It is planned to have an orchestra that can be used at the Scout rallies and assemblies and other Scout doings.

LIBERTY LOAN NUMBER TWO

Boy Scouts of America Preparing For Definite Part in Second Campaign

The Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America was recently invited to participate in a conference at the headquarters of the Liberty Loan Committee, when it was made clear that the Treasury Department and all those concerned throughout the country in the promotion of the second liberty loan would expect the Boy Scouts of America to take a definite part in the second liberty loan.

While it is impossible at this time to give any details with reference to the next loan, it seems to be the consensus of opinion that the Boy Scouts of America should undertake to do exactly as they did in the first loan.

Some as First
There will be some modification in the size and form of the printed matter and the method of distribution, but in all other respects the details will be practically the same as in the first campaign.

All Scout officials are urged to mobilize their troops without delay and with the aid of the material in the June 1st issue of Scouting definitely plan the most effective method of reaching the largest number of people and securing the greatest number of subscriptions to the second liberty loan.
Judging from the claims filed for war service emblems, more than ten thousand boys will receive such emblems. Sales amounting to over twenty millions of dollars have been definitely reported through the efforts of members of the Boy Scouts of America. Over 150,000 individual subscriptions were secured.

To Hold Cornroast and Business Meeting on Top of Mountain

Troop 13 of Pine Street Church is to have a cornroast on the top of the Rockville mountains and at the same time will hold their regular meeting.
At this meeting Troop 13 hopes to have fifteen second-class Scouts as the Scouts have been working hard on their first aid which is all that holds them back.
Next Friday Dr. Hazen will continue his instructions in first aid and advanced bandage work.
Those who expect to be second-class Scouts by next week are: James Eyrum, Joe Hazen, Loren Esvles, William Maglaughin, George Dillenderfer, Foster Keller, Robert Keller, William Towson and William Penstenmacher.

Days on the Open Road

By Red Cloud and Lone Star

The following thrilling short story written by local Boy Scouts around scenes you will know, because they are close to home, will be continued on the weekly Scout page until its completion. It will probably appear in three instalments.
The city sweltering in the white glare of a scorching mid-August sun. In the heart of the business district the torrid rays poured down between the tall buildings and rose again quivering heat waves from the asphalt in the narrow valley. In a vain effort to shut out the fierce heat, the shades were drawn on the office windows and the room was in a state of semidarkness. Persistent flies with their dismal buzzing added to the discomfort and the force which had so frequently been complained for their efficiency and lively activity was now a sorry sight.

The printing machine which under the pressure of Nut's foot usually ran with a steady, rattling bang! Bang! Bang! now gave forth only an occasional lazy "Clamp! Bang! Clamp! Bang!" The busy rattle and staccato of the graphotype operated by Doggie's energetic thumb degenerated into a poor little click, click, and stopped altogether when the perspiring operator switched off the current and turned wearily to look at Red. The crimson topped individual sat on the edge of a table with his feet swinging in schoolboy fashion to the whistled tune of the Suwanee River, while an ever growing pile of line orders and disconnections lay forgotten at his side.
"Say fellows," began Doggie, "do you know where I'd like to be?"
"Under the Equator or somewhere like that; some place where a fellow can get real warm once I guess," drawled Snubbs as he twisted lazily in his chair.
"Wrong," answered Doggie. "I'd like to be in the Boy Scout Camp just across the river from my home at New Buffalo. Say fellows, just think how the tall green trees are swaying in the summer breeze. Crows are cawing up there in the deep blue sky."
"Shut up!" growled Harper.
"Have on!" was Nut's comment.
"Blue jays are scolding in the tree
