WOMAN FIGHTS SALE OF FARM

Miss Minerva Leidig Makes Protest Against Action of Cumberland Officials

Carlisle, Pa., Sept. 10.—Miss Minerva Leidig, classed as the most unique figure with whom Cumberland county officers have had to deal, is again in the limelight, following her attempt to interrupt the sale of the property of her father, Michael Leidig, a Civil War veteran, held on Saturday.

She offered to engage in combat with the auctioneer or attorneys and was finally quieted by a constable. Brothers have asked for the partition of the estate. She claims a life estate in the home, a small farm just west of Carlisle, and is making a fight. Letters threatening suits ranging from $5,000 to $25,000 have been sent to attorneys, local newspapers carrying advertisements and others having connection with the proceedings in some way.

Miss Leidig and her father first came into prominence some years ago when, with a shotgun and pitchfork, they chased from the farm railroad officials and the county sheriff when they attempted to survey a portion of the farm taken by the Cumberland Valley Railroad under the right of eminent domain. Since that time half a score of suits have been entered by the Leidigs and they have been in frequent conflict with neighbors.

Morris, a member of the notorious "cockley" gang, was arrested about seven years ago, following an attempt to shoot detectives who went after him, and was sentenced on various charges to twenty-seven years in the penitentiary. He broke jail here while awaiting transportation to Philadelphia, but was later arrested and sentenced in the western part of the state. Officials will press for his original sentence plus three years for breaking jail.

PERRY ROBBERS STILL AT LARGE

Men Who Shot Italian Farmer Near Marysville Friday Got Little Money

Marysville, Pa., Sept. 10.—Journey two miles from Marysville on the "new" road towards Glenvale and you will encounter a rough, deeply rutted roadway leading into the mountains. Follow this road with trees and brush growing on both sides and brushing you in the face as you pass for another half-mile across the water to a clearing of probably eight acres. First you will come to a field of late corn, luxurious in its growth, and then you will see a large garden glorious in the abundance of crops that it is producing. Fruit trees with peaches predominating, hanging with fast-ripening fruit, greet your eyes.

This is the farm of the Fundine brothers—the farm whose little one-room cabin two robbers entered, dazed by the stories of money kept there; the farm, one of whose owners, John Fundine, (Giovanni Fundino in the land from which he comes across the waters), was shot early Friday evening when he refused to show the burglars where he kept his money. And this is the farm to which the robbers expect to live to bring their little wives and children from Sunny Italy at the conclusion of the war. At least they did expect to bring them, but their plans may be changed.

Across the waters John has a wife and Joe has a wife and three children. And these two men, strangers in a strange country, are working hard here in America to make a home for those they love so well. Every night Joes goes to work promptly at 6 o'clock on the Pennsylvania railroad as a night track-walker. John works hard all day on the little acres of the farm. On returning in the morning and after eating the breakfast John had prepared for him, it has been the custom this summer for Joe to help his brother work in the fields. The brothers have two horses to aid them in tilling the acres on the opposite sides of one end of the road and a stove in the other furnishes the double purpose of furnishing warmth and heat for cooking purposes. A large dog, of doubtful pedigree, lies at the doorstep and playfully jumps at you as you approach. Four kittens play about in the house, and this is where Joe and John Fundine, about 42 and 40 years, respectively, live and work. This is the place and these are the defenses of the farm when two Americans—they were Americans for their talk was easily distinguishable—sought to rob on Friday evening. They apparently knew the customs of the brothers well, for they timed their visit so that they would encounter but one of them at home. Public sympathy has been aroused for these men, sympathy that is demanding that the township and county authorities make some effort to trace the assailants of John Fundine to earth. Clues are visible here, according to those who have interested themselves in the case of the brothers. At first it was not believed that the robbers secured any plunder. When Joe was seen at the little mountain cabin on Saturday, he made the statement that three dollars and some odd cents had been taken from a pocketbook belonging to John, who was shot. He added that when he returned to his little home at 2 o'clock on Saturday morning, after taking his brother to the Harrisburg Hospital, he saw a light in the cabin in a strange country, are working hard here in America to make a home for those they love so well. A FRIEND'S ADVICE

Woman Saved From a Serious Surgical Operation.

Louisville, Ky.—"For four years I suffered from female troubles, headaches and nervousness. I could not sleep, had no appetite and it hurt me to walk. If I tried to do any work, I would have to lie down before it was finished. The doctors said I would have to be operated on and I simply broke down. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the result is I feel like a new woman. I am well and strong, do all my own house work and am glad to go to my own doctor's office. Sometimes nothing else will do, but many times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved the patient and made an operation unnecessary. If you have any symptom about which you would like to know, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free.—Advertisement.
