Up in Price, Say Keliners
Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 13.—Because of the increased demand for gasoline and other oils, members of the National Petroleum Association, in convention here, said they look for higher prices in the near future for those products. The convention represents more than fifty independent refineries east of the Rocky Mountains, The supply of petroleum, some of the members told the convention yesterday, is dwindling, and there is no hope of increasing the production while the war lasts.
