Early in the morning came hasten-ing the king, in strained, worried tones inquiring if Daniel's God way able to deliver him. Little did Darius, any more than the world to-day, know how able is God. But Daniel of old, and all the Daniels since, realized the might of the Master he served; so, in cheerful tones that contrasted with those of the king, he answered with the conventional salutation. "So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he trusted in his God." As for his plotting foes, they fell into the pit they had digged, as has been the fashion since the beginning of time. They and theirs came to a swift and dreadful end at the open plaws of the lions which had been closed against Daniel. It never pays to fight against God or God's people; it always pays to be loyal.
