coal, Dr. Garfield, it is expected, will take prompt measures to remedy the situation.

Dealers declare that the reports show nothing of a startling character. In the opinion of several local coal men, the anthracite product cannot be sold here at a lower figure than the one now in force.

"Our report shows nothing unusual," said one dealer. "You may say, however, that coal is being sold at a reasonable price in Harrisburg, considering the price we have to pay for it at the mine. The Government Commission permitted the big operators in one instance, to add 90 cents a ton. Independents were allowed to add another 75 cents, and the brokers, instead of charging a profit of ten cents, are permitted to charge 20 cents a ton.

Delivery Mounting

"Delivery dounting

"Delivery charges," continued the dealer, "are steadily mounting. It costs every coal man in this city from $1.40 to $1.75 a ton to deliver coal. This includes screening, but will not cover all of the overhead expense involved. A double team costs from $6 to $6.50 a day. Corn to feed that team costs about a dollar a day."

When asked about the likelihood of local men being able to secure enough coal to meet the needs of this city from the big operators, one dealer exhibited a letter from the Susquehanna Coal Company, stating that because of the Pennsylvania Railroad's priority order, they were able to secure but 20 per cent. of the cars needed. "Unless these conditions are changed," remarked the dealer, "you can see what may happen. Before the Commission took a hand, we were compelled to pay brokers as high as $1.25 a ton to secure a supply of coal."

When asked if, in the opinion of dealers, the present prices can be maintained, the statement was made that at prevailing prices, some dealers may not be able to continue in business. "The cost of delivery is so high that dealers are not making the profit they deserve," was the statement.
