TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA If Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally, Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grand-mother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musky mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what the ladies with gray hair and Sulphur Compound, which is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HARRISBURG PLAYHOUSES REAL MEANING OF UKELELE REVEALED

Natives Call the Little Guitars the "Jumping Flea"

Author of "The Bird of Paradise," "The Flame" and Other Successful Plays.

Richard Walton Tully is responsible for the invasion of the ukelele, which for several years conquered "musical" America, aiding the jodelers and adding to the gaiety of the foot-trot.

Every time playwright Tully thinks of the English translation of the Kanaka word "ukelele" he has a laugh. Those who rejoice in Tully's acquaintance know that the ukelele note of quiet humor, as gentle as the winds which blow from the Hawaiian Isles to his own California.

While the author was on the Puna coast gathering material for "The Bird of Paradise" he fell a ready victim to the sad, languorous, dreamy music of the natives and decided to introduce it in his play. To this end he introduced five Kanaka boys to the United States, who play the ukelele to sing the voluptuous native songs.

The manner in which the instrument is played—it being held close to the chest and the fingers of the right hand striding across the strings with great rapidity—causes the little instrument to jump, particularly if the tune be a lively one, such as the islanders like.

The play itself is a medium full up to the capabilities of its star. It tells the story of a merry vagabond, traveling along with irresponsible highway robbers, who come at last to harbor in a mansion, the sort they had dreamed of, but never thought to enter. There they are welcomed, made much of, wine, dined, and put thoroughly at ease on account of the vague threat of impending doom. The number of persons who verge on their existence multiples, the incidents that crowd upon them increase, and always in the author of the play has used them to climaxes that reach their peak at the end of the play.

NEAR DEATH! Saved by a Miracle

Linden Hall, Pa., "Two years ago my back began to get weak and pain, but I didn't pay any attention, thinking it would soon get all right again. But instead I got worse and I called the doctor. He gave me some medicine and I got worse. I went to bed. Sometimes he gave me pills, then powders, then liquid medicine. My appetite was gone and my weight dropped from 190 to 130. I could not sleep only when forced by an opiate. I was up and down. Sometimes my water would look like spring water, then like blood, then like milk, and pained me. We sent for a trial package of Anuric. I took them and the pain let up. I got two more bottles and after using two more I went to work again. Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets alone saved my life. One day I plainly asked my physician if I was going to die. He pointed to an apple hanging in a basket and said the apple—no telling when it would drop. Just then the trial box of the Anuric Tablets came, and a great change with them. Thank God and Dr. Pierce for restoring my health."

Fair Hope, Pa.—"I hereby testify that I used Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets for kidney trouble, and they have done me so much good that I would like for all other people who are bothered with kidney trouble to use them. I have used a great many kinds of medicine but none has helped me or has done me as much good as Anuric. My name is ANNIE WILLIAMS, Fair Hope, Pa."
