The third of the school talks on the war, which are being delivered daily in the public schools of this city beginning to-day, will be on the subject, "What We Have Done in the War," and will be given Friday. It is as follows:

What We've Done In the War

Through volunteering, registering 10,000,000 under the selective draft, and by consolidating the militia with the Federal forces our Army now numbers 1,500,000.

FOR TRAINING THOSE WHO ARE TO GO FORWARD

For training those who are to go forward later we have built sixteen cities, accommodating 40,000 men each. At one fort a barracks 24 by 140 feet, two stories high, was built in an hour and a half. The lumber used in these camp cities would build a sidewalk four times around the earth.

OFFICERS HAVE BEEN PREPARED

Officers have been prepared for their work in special camps. The money has been raised and spent. Congress has voted $18,000,000,000 war funds for the year. It is expending $2,400,000 daily.

We are constructing an air fleet of 25,000 airplanes, a majority to be in action next June. Air pilots are training in seven camps.
