Cyanide of Potassium Found in Room of Steward at Big Camp

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—One of the most subtle and dangerous plots conceived in the course of the great war was uncovered and foiled by the vigilance of the officers in charge of the aviation camp at Princeton, N. J., on Monday and Tuesday of this week.

An investigation, resulting from chance remarks dropped by one of the students, led to the discovery of two pounds of cyanide of potassium in the room of Fenton Hill, owned by Samuel O. Livingood, a private in the Aviation Corps.

The origin of the plot and the name or names of those who conceived it are still unknown, so far as could be learned. The officials refuse to discuss the affair in any way.

Samuel O. Livingood, the man charged with being the arch-plotter, is 24 years old. His home is given as 2400 E. 12th street, Philadelphia.
