REV. HUNT DID

Dr. Swallow Speaks Before Historical Society on His Accomplishments

REV. THOMAS P. HUNT

"Thomas P. Hunt, the Mighty Hunter, and Some of His Hunts," was the subject of an interesting lecture before the Dauphin County Historical Society last evening by the Rev. Dr. Silas C. Swallow. Dr. Swallow was a personal friend of the Rev. Thomas P. Hunt and the material for the lecture was based on his personal experiences with, and reminiscences of, this mighty hunter.

Exhibits Refers

Dr. Hugh Hamilton exhibited before the Harrisburg Historical Society last night two interesting relics of the Revolutionary War. Two horns, the property of Mr. Brown, of Philadelphia, were sent to Nuss & Co., South Cameron street, this city for certain repairs. The horns were used by musicians in General George Washington's army, and received a baptism of fire at Valley Forge.

Dr. Swallow, who has been for 27 years the examining physician in this city for the Regular Army, was greatly interested in the unique instruments, and prepared an address which was given before the Historical Society.

Dr. Swallow said in part: "The Rev. Thomas P. Hunt was a hero, a philanthropist, a reformer, a statesman in the truest sense of that word. He was a Christian patriot of the Nineteenth Century. He believed in 'One flag, one land, one heart, one hand, one nation evermore!'"

"He was born in Virginia in 1794 and died in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in 1880 and hence was 86 years old at his death. He inherited slaves and freed them. He probably traveled more miles, delivered more temperance addresses and pledged more persons to total abstinence than any other man of his period. Early in the Civil War he offered his services to the Union Army as a private, but was rejected because less than five feet high. More than sixty-five years old and a hunchback he was accepted as a chaplain of cavalry and though no more ludicrous sight could be imagined than 'Hunt on horse back' yet he was the hero and idol of his regiment and division. He was a graduate of Hampton and Sydney College, a Presbyterian minister of note during the middle third of the Nineteenth Century, and a reformer and lecturer of state and nation-wide fame."

"Physically he was a duplicate of the Greek monk, Peanude's, description of the Thracian fabulist, Aesop. Namely: 'Exceedingly deformed, his head a comical shape, his belly protuberant, his limbs distorted.' Add to this that Mr. Hunt was a hunchback and you have a fairly good description of a physique that formed the tabernacle for a cultured mind, a logical reasoner, a religiously philosophic temperant, and a soulful friend of God and of humanity."

Mr. Hunter was a hunter. He helped mightily to hunt slavery to its death; treason to its hiding place, and fashionable follies to their doom. If living to-day he would be a fearless advocate of democracy in a world-wide war on autocracy in its ally of the allies, an advocate and liberal patron of Liberty Bonds and possibly on horseback in France stimulating by his presence and voice the thousands of Sammees now battling for world-wide freedom. Yes, if living to-day Mr. Hunt would be in the fore-front of the fray."
