GEN. CLEMENT IS SAFE IN FRANCE

Pennsylvania Commander to Study Fighting in Line Trenches

Sunbury, Pa., Oct. 15.—Major General Charles M. Clement, commander of the Pennsylvania division of guardsmen in Federal service has arrived safely in France, according to a telegram received here by Mrs. Clement. General Clement, who will join the American expeditionary forces for observation of trench warfare methods, cabled: "Arrived safe and well."

After a departure from Augusta, Ga., that was unannounced, General Clement came to Sunbury, arriving here Wednesday, September 19, in time to cast his ballot at the primary election.

The name of the ship and the port of departure, as well as the date, were not announced. Mrs. Clement returned to Sunbury before the vessel sailed. His arrival at France, however, was expected yesterday or to-day, and the suspense increased with the passing of the hours until the cablegram came and brought relief.

General Clement is in France under orders from the Department for "observation purposes." He will be accompanied by Colonel H. L. King, his chief of staff, an officer of the Regular Army; Captain Theodore D. Boal, of Boalsburg, his personal aid, whose son is an officer in the French army, and two enlisted men, Sergeant George M. Adams, of Philadelphia, and Sergeant Frank Ernst, of Williamsport.

It is expected that he will return in the latter part of November and that the division will not go into foreign service until spring.

Buy Here Not Alone Because Prices Are Lower, but Because Qualities Are Better

Meeting the War Conditions and the Wishes of Our Friends

Through increasing scarcity of materials entering into the making of everything, wearable and otherwise, prices have advanced to such a point that quite naturally limitations have been drawn somewhat closer upon the variety of merchandise of quality that can be kept within a 25 cent price limit.

Our great army of patrons, realizing the unusual conditions, has urged us to overstep this price limit, where necessary, and provide a general low-priced line of wearing materials and household utilities that in point of quality and price-economy will, in these days, carry the same advantages as former prices did under normal conditions.

This we can and will do, by reason of our exceptional buying facilities, due to large quantities in which we buy, and the fact that we buy for spot cash.

So, during the strenuous conditions incidental to the war period, you will continue to find it distinctly advantageous to buy here—not alone because prices are lower, but qualities are better.

Extraordinary Values in Two of Many Departments

The Dry Goods Department is overflowing with new fall merchandise, attractive alike in quality and price. Always Something New In Millinery. Every week marks the showing of a new assortment of clever styles, embracing something charming and different at all times. The great collection of hats now being shown, are brighter, newer and more interesting than ever. Trimmings, too, in a wide variety of the newest effects.
