

On the Cockerels When Too Costly to Feed Them

Washington, D. C., Oct. 19.—Can the cockerels when it no longer pays to feed them, is the advice the United States Department of Agriculture is giving to the boys and girls of the poultry clubs in the north and west. Canning saves feed and puts on the pantry shelves material for a chicken dinner when poultry is highest in price. This is the method taught to the club members: Kill fowl, dress at once, cool, wash thoroughly, draw, then cut into convenient sections. Dip into cold water to insure cleanliness. Place in wire basket or cheesecloth and boil until meat can be removed from bones easily. Then remove from boiling liquid to separate the meat from bones. Take the meat off in as few sections as possible; pack hot in hot glass jars or enameled cans; fill jars with pot liquid after it has been concentrated one-half; add level teaspoonful of salt per quart of meat, for seasoning; put rubbers and caps of jars into position, not tight. Cap and tin cans. Sterilize for the length of time given below for the particular type outfit used: Water bath, home-made or commercial (quart jars), 3 1/2 hours. Water seal, 2 1/2 degrees, 3 hours. 5 pounds steam pressure, 2 hours. 10 to 15 pounds steam pressure, 1 hour. Remove jars, tighten covers; invert to cool and test joints. CAUTION: Only the very best types of rubbers should be used.

SIBERIA. THE POLITICAL LABORATORY

Siberia is more than an inexhaustible storehouse for food and fuel. It has been, of late, the greatest university in the world. It is the laboratory of the Russian pacifist, who is one of the most interesting of personalities in that he lives as he preaches. It is estimated that there are two million Austrian and German soldiers in Russia and Siberia. Hundreds of thousands of these are not living in camps at all, but are spread across the country, in the homes of the simple country folk, where they naturally assume the position of professor in political economy, politics, and international brotherhood among people to whom thought along these lines is not only brand new, but doubly interesting in the face of the internal and external affairs of Russia in the last three years. For more than two years Russia has been transforming Siberia—the dungeon into Siberia the college. And prisoners from the Central Power have been the professors, living with their students and proving by their actions that Austrians, Hungarians and Germans are not beasts, but peaceful fellows, glad to shun the dangers of war and live the life of farmers and laborers in fruitful Siberia. Among the Austrians, many are excellent musicians and artists. Scores of lesser Fritz Kreislers are furnishing music for Siberia to-day, such instrumental music as Russia, away from a few metropolitans, has never heard. When you question these calm-eyed men, they admit that they are content to be where they are; but some say that they hope this war will soon cease so that they can fight against Prussianism. Poor old Prussianism! Like an emphysematic football, it imagines itself the center of interest, when it is really only an object for kicks and thumps. It will leave the present game muddy and scratched, but the question is whether it will be used in a bigger game later on, or handed over to the scrub eleven for punting or signal practice.—Maynard Owen Williams, in The Christian Herald.

too early. As a rule the best time is from November 1 to 15, or just before the ground freezes. Cabbage is not injured by light freezes, but it rots readily if stored before the weather is cold. Cabbage in storage requires a temperature just above the freezing point and a moderate amount of moisture—a sufficient amount to prevent wilting on the one hand and not enough to cause decay on the other. The most economical method of storing cabbage, according to J. R. Bechtel, of the Pennsylvania State College, is to bury it. This method eliminates the necessity for special houses or structures. A protected location, preferably in a wood, furnishes a suitable spot for storing cabbage. Place the partly trimmed heads with the root stalks removed one layer deep on a light bed of leaves covering the surface of the ground. Add sufficient leaves as a cover for protection against freezing. In a fairly thick wood the snow, which is an excellent protective covering, will not be blown away nor melt rapidly during the thaws, and less covering will be required. Only a light covering of leaves should be put on first. More may be added as the weather becomes severe. If the cabbage becomes too warm, decay of the outer leaves sets in and the crop may be destroyed. A very satisfactory field method of storing is as follows: Place the cabbage heads on top of the ground in rows about three heads wide extended in the direction of the slope for drainage.

State College Recommends Method of Storing Cabbage

Cabbage for storing should be sound, well-matured and solid. Heads showing signs of bursting had better be made into sauerkraut. The mistake is frequently made of storing cabbage and other vegetables

THE NEAR SUFFRAGETTE IN PERU There have probably been no more interesting events in recent years in Lima than those attending the fight relative to the religious freedom bill. The priests exerted their utmost power to block the measure and were able to ally the women of the country, as a mass, on their side. Utterly contrary to the secluded habits of the Peruvian women, they marched the streets in processions, in protest against this measure, giving to Peruvian men one of the most unique spectacles in the history of the country, where a suffragette has hardly been heard of up to the present time. When the bill was finally read in the Senate, the galleries were packed with women, and while the speaker was reading it a fanatical priest leaped over the railing, seized the bill from the hand of the reader, and tore it into shreds, stamping it on the floor. This was the sign for a wild burst of applause on the part of the women, who proceeded to throw bunches of hay from the galleries down upon the heads of the deputies, signifying that these dignified Peruvian officials were donkeys. In spite of these unusual protests the bill was carried, and the perennial clause in the old law, stating that no religion other than that of the Catholic church shall be permitted in the country, was legislated away, and Peru took a long step forward in the matter of modern progress and enlightenment. This measure furnished an opportunity to see the real sentiment of the men of Peru in relation to religion. I spoke with many of the citizens of Lima regarding this matter, and the answer almost universally was: "We men do not give much attention to the church. It is a matter for our women and children largely. The church is not really a vital concern to us."—The Christian Herald.
