It is not seemed mechanical, as when some oid Spanish Jews in gabardines went up to the wall and read for a space, then, after perfunctorily touching the stones with their lips, stepped for to one side and chatted and laughed. I was informed that these went were fired to say prayers at the Wailing Place in Jerusalem one fedalty. It proclaimed their trust in Gealty. It proclaimed their trust in Gealt structed to hold itself in readiness for orders to be sent away. None of the men in this body was selected in the draft. It is believed they will be sent to France, to be made a part cincomplete engineer regiments there. Dauphin county lads, together with their conrades from Adams county, who are in the 316th Infantry, are going to fight this war right and along high-grade, modern, scientific lines. They are going to have a press agent. Fact. He is "Joe" Boss, who covered many newspaper assign ments, as well as doing odd jobs about the newspapers during the time when the solons were absent from Capitol Hill.

"By the way," said the new P. A. "I haven't seen anything in your paper about the doughty lads from Dauphin, zenith county of an unfettered to state. Why?"

"Because it wasn't your turn yet," was suggested. "Now that you are a press agent proceed." So here is the first, press agent story from Meade. "While Company A of the 316th Infantry of the National Army feels a particular pride in all its members, its especial stars are two of the best athletes in camp No person convers.

Then, as I was about to leave. I saw a woman of perhaps thirrty years draw near. She had been paying at the other end of the wall. As she approached, I perceived that she bore such a face as might have been Rachel's—strong, melancholy, spiritual, queenly. She was manifestly objivious to, the motley company about her, of Jews from many nations; her soul was in her rapt face, turning toward the great blocks of yellowish stone, still standing from the foundation of Solomon's Temple. Her hands were classed to her bosom, and her lips moved in prayer. She was seeing with great lustrous eyes, not those many later to have a press, agent proceed." So here is the first, press agent proceed." So here is the first, press agent proceed." So here is the first, press agent proceed." The proceed of the other end of the wall. "Not a whit less famous in the annals of the sport is Henry Shellenberger, of Middletown. A basketball player unknown to no fan in the central part of Pennsylvania, he brings to his activities as a soldier every facility that he showed as an athlete.

"The East is the East" Nobody will ever understand the Jew until it is remembered that he is an Oriental. The deep-flowing, religious spirit of this people who were chosen to be custodians of humanity's ingious spirit of this people who were chosen to be custodians of humanity's loftiest religious truth is partially explained by the Oriental's supreme interest in religion. The Occidental is not so. To this day the people of all the East, but especially of the region called the Near East, whence sprang the Jews, put religion first. All sorts of religions thrive there; an irreligious man there is unthinkable. The villagers of the hills of Lebanon, the shepherds in the fields of Palestine, the Bedouins of the desert in their tents, the diverse peoples in the Tigris-Euphrates Valley, talk over historic and doctrinal religious questions, just as a group of Americans discuss politics or baseball.

At the present time the region discuss politics or baseball.

At the present time the region where the Bible story was enacted is prostrate beneath the cruel heel of a war in which it was embroiled by the unscrupulous appeal to the religious motive of a European monarch. A million Christians have perished. Jews by the thousands have died of starvation. Armies are encamped in Jerusalem and Hebron and Damascus. Over the district of the exile, old Babylonia, a series of dreadful battles have been waged, and British prisoners have been driven, in abject misery, over the route of the returning Hebrew patriots.

sense a man's religion is the chief fact with regard to him. If you tell me what this is, you tell me to a very great extent what the man is, what kind of things he will do."

The flippant youth, or the immature man, who "has no time for religion." and who is not interested in the church, and feels too big for a Bible class, has all the history of the human race, and the testimony of all the great thinkers, arrayed squarely against him. One hour's honest research upon the subject will start any man toward a realization of the truth that religion is the them.

A new sense of the proper functions of the church in a community is taking hold of our day. Not only for Preaching and worship, but as centers of the social life of the neighborhood, the churches have a use. Whatever is of general interest, whatever makes for real neighborliness, whatever promotes intellectual uplift, whatever ministers to patriotism and social betterment, is proper uplift, whatever ministers to patriotism and social betterment, is proper for the church. A return of the old-fashioned lyceum, a revival of the oft-derided church supper (not for money-making, but for good fellow-ship), the maintenance of a local Chautauqua—all these are proper for the church, which are placed in the midst of the people to minister to all the needs of their spirit. In the promotion of world-brotherhood, what agency so appropriate and effective as the church?

of these builders and the opposition they meet. To-day let us rejoice with them. The laying of the foundations of the new temple was made the occasion of a great festival, a thanks-giving service. The idea seems as incongruous as that of the first Amerisan Thanksgiving Day which the Pligrims kept. All around was the desolation wrought by Nebuchadnezzar's forces. Only the eye of faith could see any result of the return and the reconstruction. Yet when the foundation stones were laid a feast of praise and rejoicing was held, with music and shouting and the antiphonal refrain

"Oh, give thanks unto Jehovah: for He is good;

Tor His loving kindness endureth forever."

A CENTRAL TOWER AND SPIRE; OR, SEVERAL SPIRES?

A Question of Great Moment to the Sky Line of

The Cathedral of St. John the Divine, which is rising from one of the most elevated spots on Manhattan Island, is very naturally a subject of considerable anxiety to the fact that it is positively questioned, not only by some of the strongest mart-lovers of New York. Years will pass before it is finished, but it is and mass it shall justify the enormous sums of money spent on it and the prominence of its site, which accuses it to be seen from a large part of Greater New York.

In the October number of The Art World one of the architects, who took part in the original competition for the plans—Mr. Husstake bold issue with the change in the design that took place when the winners of the competition, Messrs. Heins and La Farge, were set aside and a new firm of architects put in their place. Nobody seems to know what influences were at work to cause such a radical change in the plans long after the choir had been erected. The original plans called for a cathedral in the Romanesque at style of architecture. After crypt and choir were built the design was abruptly changed to Gothic. Mr. Huss maintains that the change from the broad and lofty central tower of the design that was accepted to that proposed by Messrs. Cam and Ferguson, the new architects, will hurt the appearance of the building. Says Mr. Huss:

"Not only do they substitute two spires for one thus weakening the building. Says Mr. Huss:
