Life's Problems Are Discussed

BY MRS. WILSON WOODROW 'Make 'em laugh. Make 'em cry Make 'em wait."

That was the rule Tom Taylor,

That was the rule Tom Taylor, the English dramatist, laid down for the writing of a successful play; and, by the same token, it is an ex-cellent,formula to follow in life. "Don't be too ready with your confidences. Let people guess a bit about you. If I were a Polonius, called upon to advise a young man or young woman starting out upon a career, that is the first injunc-tion I would give. It will not only add to the interest you arouse, but will surely keep you out of trouble. As the English policeman warns a person when he makes an arrest, "Remember, anything you say may be used against you." There is more money and more credit to be gained by keeping a still tongue than by extolling your virtues and accomplishments, no matter how genuine they may be. Your listeners never believe half that you tell them about yourself, any-way, unless it is bad; and then thy have a shrewd suspicion that it is considerably worse than you have made out.

where to go. It is always harder, anyway, with a woman. Of course, there were people she might visit, but she was in no mood for frivolity, and after partaking of a cup of coffee at one of the restaurants she began to retrace her steps to the apartment. Safely inside, she dedid-ed to stay, although the look of the rooms, desolate and forsaken, that was unbearable. She wondered if it would be possible for her throad that was unbearable. She wondered if it would be possible for her throad that was unbearable. She wondered how long it would take Bobby to decide matters, and she cuddled up
