Fighting in Moscow More Serious Than in Petrograd, Is Report

The fighting in Moscow between the Bolsheviks and troops of the provisional government has been far more serious than anything that has occurred in Petrograd, according to special dispatches received here from the Russian capital. Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says he talked with a member of the Moscow city council who came to Petrograd to appeal for help. He was besieged four days in the council building from which he made his way to the railroad station through the Bolsheviks. He said the real fighting began on November 19 when the Bolsheviks force seized the Kremlin. They were expelled by a party of cadets, but the Bolsheviks later were again driven from the Kremlin.

Support Rebels From November 12 onward the dispatch adds, the councilman reported that the military operations were concentrated in the center of the city. The government building consisted of about 3,000 military cadets and a hastily organized white guard of students. They chose their plentiful supply of rifles and machine guns from the arsenal of the 10,000 soldiers forming the Moscow garrison. They numbered 25,000 supported the Bolsheviks. Most of the members remained in their barracks but thousands of soldiers escaped from Moscow by train and on foot. The Bolshevik Red Guard in Moscow was composed mostly of boys from twelve to eighteen years old. It had no combat field guns with which the Kremlin was provided. From other points their firing was very effective. The Bolsheviks were marked, smothering private houses and killing the inmates.

Three thousand persons, chiefly members of the peaceful population, had been killed in the streets. Wednesday, the councilman said, and there was no means of collecting the bodies. The French viceroy had fallen. There had been continued firing in many parts of the city from windows and roofs and the city was terrorized and afraid to move. It was impossible to get food supplies to the center of the city.

The National Hotel, where there were many British and French visitors, was under fire for several days and the upper part of the hotel was destroyed by a shell. On Tuesday the committee on public safety was sitting and the committee decided to move to the Kremlin. When the committee moved there were many British and French visitors, who were under fire for several days.

Cadets Defend Kremlin When the Russian capital, Moscow, the Kremlin was well defended by machine guns manned by cadets and there was an abundant supply of ammunition. The Russian bombardment was concentrated on the Kremlin last Wednesday, the day the councilman left Moscow.

At the outbreak of the revolution of the Assumption within the Kremlin was destroyed and the Church of St. Basil's caught fire. The French viceroy had fallen. There had been continued firing in many parts of the city from windows and roofs and the city was terrorized and afraid to move. It was impossible to get food supplies to the center of the city.

REGISTRATION OF CITY'S WOMEN IS DISAPPOINTING

Mrs. Chamberlin Says Harrisburgers Are Almost at Point of Being Unpatriotic "Give us training and we'll do our duty." This is the statement made on many of the cards received at registration headquarters, 206 Walnut street. Women are willing to take part of men, provided that they are given the proper training. Recent registrations of women include two women who offer their services as brakemen or conductors on railroad trains. Another woman offers her services as a mail carrier. Public service of all kinds is recognized by the women in their registrations. Many of them volunteer for service as postmistresses and stenographers in the governmental service.

Women of Hummelstown have realized that it is the patriotic duty of every loyal woman to register, and they have registered in so large numbers that Miss Maude Baker, in charge of the work there, was compelled to order another supply of registration cards from the county headquarters.
