Letters From the Front

HOW PARIS LOOKS TO A YANKEE AIRPLANE PILOT

How Paris looks to an American who has just won his pilot's license in hard work in a French aviation plant is described below in a letter by Walter J. Shaffer to his parents in Dauphin:

Dear Mother: Am back again at dear old Avord with emphasis on the "dear" for the food is worse than ever. At least so they tell me and I love my meals. I have not tried the "ordinaire" myself. After seven days in Paris, coming back to such a dump was quite a come down, for although I did not endeavor to paint the town red, I had quite a nice time. I had to be economical going into Paris to spend seven days and have some fun meanwhile.

There are three class of these Niupouts, the 23 metre, the 25 and 18. The first two types I fly with an instructor, while the last—and the smallest—is alone. That is, if I am lucky enough to get that far, because the least mistake in double command and the punishment is that the pupil is transferred to bombing planes, something which I do not want, not that it is any more dangerous. Because it is considered much safer. But I want to get to Fan, where the acrobatic school is situated. That is my ambition to drive one of these tiny, fast little birds like I can a canoe through white water, which you will admit, Dad, is pretty fair. Here's hoping anyway.

MAY SETTLE CASES It was expected in common pleas court to-day that some of the suits against the state to settle cases degrading when property was taken over in the Capitol Park extension may be started late to-day.
