

GERMANY WOULD CURTAIL TRAVEL ON RAILROADS

Drastic Measures Will Be Taken to Reduce Coal Consumption

Berlin, November 23.—Germany has resorted to stringent measures of reducing its coal consumption during the coming winter by cutting down its train service and curtailing the number of people who travel, especially in express trains.

The latest edition of the Journal of the Association of German Railroads, held in Berlin, it was announced, announces that at a recent meeting of the representative of all German railroads, held in Berlin it was unanimously decided not only to reduce the number of trains but to put such a high cost upon traveling by means of radical raises in the price of tickets to insure that only those will travel who absolutely must do so.

The advances contemplated and which probably will become effective within a very short time are as follows: On all tickets for express trains costing up to five marks, an extra charge of three marks will be levied; tickets hitherto costing from five to ten marks will be taxed eight marks extra; from 10 to 15 marks, 13 marks extra; from 15 to 25 marks, 20 marks extra; and for sums above 25 marks, 10 marks extra for each 10 marks as ordinarily charged.

Likewise there is to be a sharp limitation in baggage regulations that both the size and number of trunks, as well as their weight, will be cut down. For the first time in many years, Sunday trains are to be reduced in number. Hitherto they have always run on weekday schedules, sometimes even having been increased in number because of the German's love of making Sunday excursions.

In order to assure the punctual arrival and departure of trains, which unfortunately suffered greatly last winter because it was impossible to get up enough steam to haul the long heavy express trains, the timetables will be revised so that trips will be no longer than under the present schedule—though probably no longer than they have been actually taking.

GERMANS FLEE AND FIGHT IN OPEN

proceeding last night and this morning.

Tanks Press On

West of Cambria tanks, cavalry and infantry were pressing the attack vigorously about Fontaine Notre Dame and the retreat of the Bourlon wood. Fontaine Notre Dame has not been officially reported captured but the story goes that tank crews were drinking coffee by the civilians in this place this morning. (Field Marshal Haig's official Thursday night said the Germans had retaken Fontaine Notre Dame.)

Further north near Bullecourt the British were in possession of the entire underground fortification known as the tunnel trench which had been famed for its supposed impregnability. It least five determined counterattacks have been smothered in this region. Southeast of Bullecourt hard fighting occurred at Moeuvres last night and a strong counterattack was repulsed.

Last Line Broken

The last line of trench defenses in the region of Cantaine have been broken and the British today were firmly established at many points in the Masnières-Beaurois line south of Cambria.

It is now possible to give more details of Tuesday's battle. In the advance south of Cambria the first hard fighting occurred at Lataau wood, which lies on the Cambria highway south of Masnières. This wood finally was cleared of Germans and the advance continues toward Masnières. Some opposition was encountered in a suburb but by 1 o'clock this had been overcome and the British had crossed the L'Escant canal at a lock. The small German garrison fought bitterly to retain Masnières. The whole place was undermined with dugouts in which the enemy was hidden with machine guns, but the Germans were forced to give up this place after a sanguinary struggle, although some of them were still holding out in the cellars to-day.

German Resistance Weak

Marching was taken with a small resistance on the part of the enemy and this gave the British a second crossing of the canal. The advancing troops forced a passage here at the same hour as Masnières was entered. The Masnières-Beaurois trench line north of Masnières apparently had been reinforced by Germans from Cambria, and this held up the advance temporarily with rifle and machine gun fire but the British ultimately forced the Germans from the trenches in hand-to-hand fighting.

German resistance on the first day was comparatively weak as a whole and they surrendered freely in many places. Yesterday their lines stiffened and hard fighting followed. German reinforcements from Lens and the two companies of invalids already mentioned were thrown into the line.

First counterattack

The first counterattack came over the ridge from the northeast of Masnières. The enemy advanced in massed formation as in the early days of the war. The British had concentrated a large number of machine guns at this point and were hoping for a counterattack. They permitted the enemy to advance to within a thousand yards of the line before they opened fire. The machine guns and artillery were turned on the Germans and they were smashed in a withering storm.

At 1 o'clock an attack on Marching was attempted by the enemy but as in the former case, they were caught in a heavy artillery and machine gun fire and turned back after suffering severely.

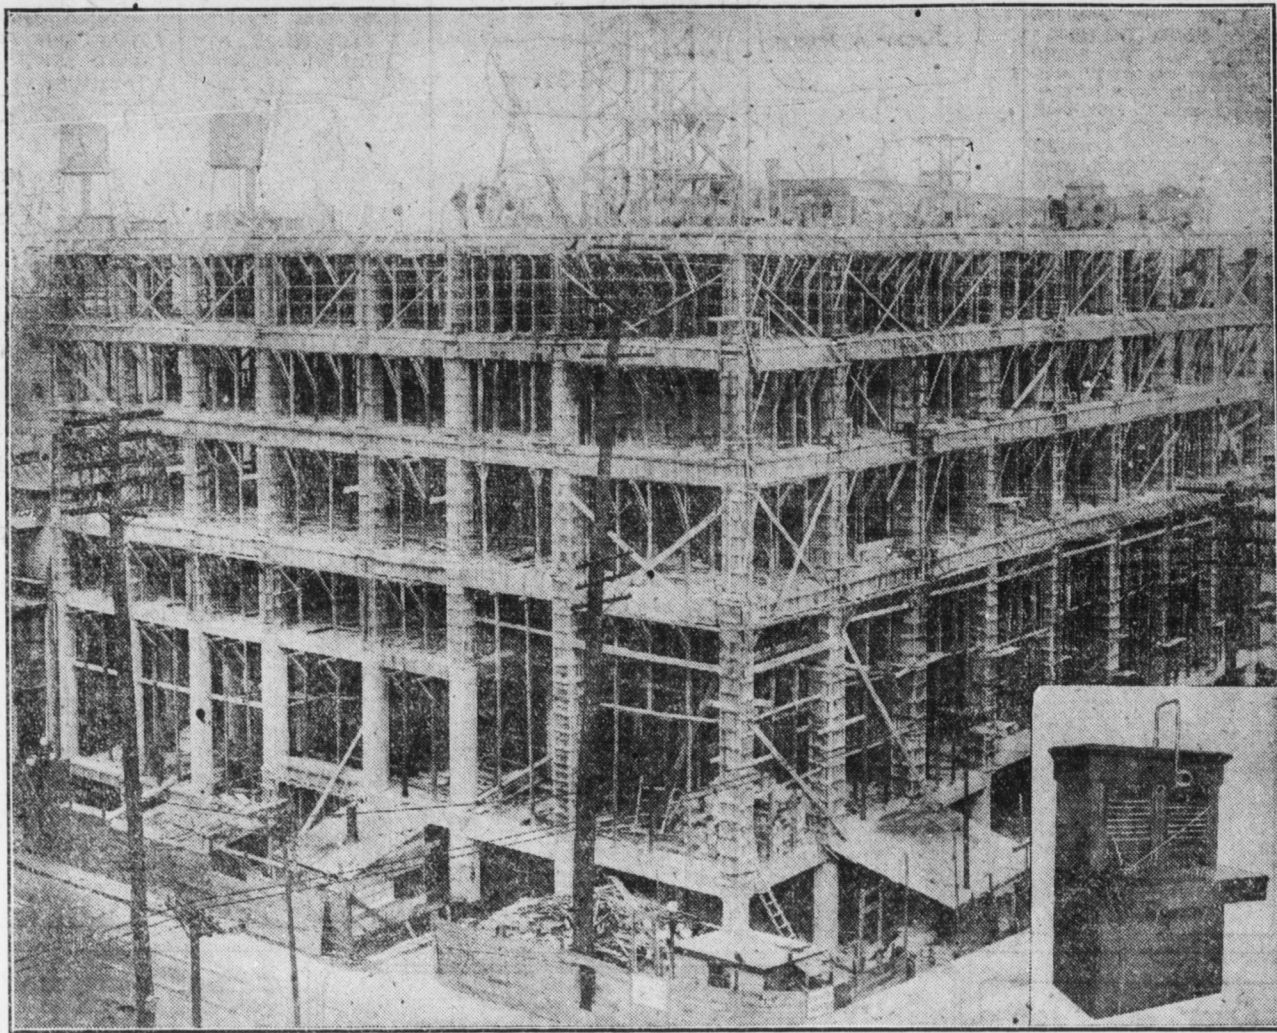

Fighting at Close Quarters

An hour later another body of Germans advanced on Noyelles, which was held by the company of British troops. Here some of the stiffest fighting of the battle took place at close quarters. Both sides rushed up reinforcements and for two hours the battle surged back and forth through the streets and among the buildings. It was a melee in which the bayonet played the principal part. The Germans fought well, but they were not good enough to withstand the fury of the British assault and gradually they were forced back across the canal to the east.

SWITCHBOARD FOR NEW PENN-HARRIS

With enough wire to reach from this city to beyond Lebanon or York the Penn-Harris hotel which will be ready for occupation next summer is going to be modernly "telephoned." Arrangements have been concluded by District Manager S. S. Eberts and the officials of the hotel company. It was announced today for the installation of a large Bell telephone private branch exchange switchboard with five trunks—that is lines for out-going and in-coming service—and 250 stations. Conferences have been under way with the architects and builders for the telephone conduit which will run from the basement to the roof. This conduit of iron will carry a lead cable in which will run 300 tiny pairs of shiny copper wire, each little wire insulated with very thin paper. From the switchboard and through this conduit, there will stretch fingers of copper to every nook and corner of the big hotel. The number of stations and the number of trunks to be put in operation will not be the maximum number available for the switchboard. The maximum number of trunks will be 15 and the greatest number of lines will be 320, and it is expected that before long the success of the hotel will warrant an extension of its home as well as its telephone equipment. Work has already begun on the installation as far as the planning of it goes and The Bell Telephone Company, it was learned today will work along with the builders, so that the final work will consist of nothing but placing the switchboard and the instruments. The wiring will be deftly concealed within the walls and one will need but to lift the receiver in the Penn-Harris hotel to talk to anywhere. The new Penn-Harris hotel will be a twelve-story building. The exterior to be granite to the lounging and dining room and terra cotta up to the third floor level and gray trestle brick to the tenth floor, corners, etc., terra cotta to the roof line. The execution of the contract is under the supervision and direction of W. L. Stoddard, architect. There are to be 250 rest rooms. The hotel will cost $1,500,000.00 and date of completion about June 1st, 1918. All of the woodwork in the lobby is to be selected American walnut, and the grillroom to be selected white oak. The superstructure is of concrete and fireproof throughout. The guest rooms and lounging and dining room are to be selected white quality kiln dried gum. There are to be two passenger elevators, one service elevator, and one freight elevator. The hotel is to be managed by United Hotels Company.
