Advice to Lovelorn DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: Are there any nice men? That may sound like a rather blunt question, but it is a question which has arisen in my mind after going with young men for about four years. I associate with refined people and meet young men of very good families, whom I invite to my home and have my parents meet them. After seeing them for awhile I am insulted. They seem so nice, and I am so disappointed. I conduct myself in a quiet manner, and cannot understand why it is impossible to enjoy the friendship of young men. Certainly girls who have lots of friends must overlook a great deal, but I cannot just for the sake of a good time. I may add I am not good-looking, but people say I have pretty eyes. Will you kindly answer my question and tell me just what is the trouble? DISAPPOINTED.
