Six smashing records In the most splendid motor test that the world has ever seen—the Twin Six principle again demonstrates its marvelous economy. And a Packard twelve-cylinder engine has evidenced its ability to get record power from every atom of its fuel. At Sheephead Bay, in an official six-hour trial, Ralph DePalma has battered down all world records for high speed endurance—covering 633 miles in six hours, an average of 105.6 miles an hour, as against 94.4, the previous record. With a Packard engine of only 300 cubic inches cylinder capacity he traveled, in a single hour, 112.96 miles—bettering a record no one has been able to lower in seven years—a record made by an English machine of twice this cylinder capacity. Then, in succession, the world's records for two, three, four, five and six hours fell to the game Italian pilot and his flying car. These six world records are but further proofs of the amazing endurance and economy of the Packard car.
