CAMP MEADE BOYS IN DIG-IN PRACTICE

Dugouts Forty Feet Deep, Capable of Holding an Entire Regiment

Camp Meade, Admiral, Md., Dec. 10.—The boys have started to dig dugouts for their first real taste of life "Over There."

When the course is reached it is found that the hill is made of potato beds dug for underneath the ground.

There are to be three lines of fighting trenches in front of the dugouts, and the grenade throwers, gas and rifle units, signal corps, artillery and infantry will be pressed into service in these mimic battles to thrust back the imaginary foe and thus provide the boys with the knowledge of real conditions under which they will live and fight with a real enemy in a few months.

CROSSED WIRES CAUSE A FIRE

Grocery Store Gutted by Destructive Blaze Started in Cellar

The three-story brick building at the corner of Fourth and Woodbine streets, 2157 Fourth street, was partly destroyed by fire of unknown origin yesterday afternoon.

The first floor of the building is occupied by the grocery store of W. A. Gerner, and the floors above are apartments. The manager of the store, S. E. Miller, lives on the second floor.

The fire started in the basement and quickly reached the first floor, where it completely destroyed the stock and fixtures of the store, and gutted the building.

Smoke and water damaged the second and third floors. It was necessary to cut large holes in the halls and walls to fight the flames.

The loss to Mr. Gerner through the burning of his stock is estimated at $2,000 or $3,000. This is only partially covered by insurance. The business of the store will be conducted from the Hill Store at 1201 Mulberry street.

While the cause of the fire is not known, Mr. Kinsinger stated that it was probably due to defective wiring. Another fire started about 6 o'clock, and its origin was traced to a point where two insulated wires were crossed.
