

STATE PLEADS FOR THE HONEY BEES

Should Not Be Harmed by Some Old Methods of Handling Their Hives and Honey

The antiquated but common practice of some beekeepers to smoke out colonies of bees to procure the honey has resulted in the killing of thousands of bees each fall in this state and efforts are being made by the State Department of Agriculture to stop the practice.

Every effort is being made to increase the honey production of the state and thus help out the sugar shortage, as honey is a most acceptable substitute for sugar.
