HUNTERS KILL TAME TURKEYS

Mifflin County Poultryman Loses Large Number of His Fine-Bred Birds

Lewistown, Pa., Dec. 19.—Many wild turkeys were killed in this section during the recent hunting season, and as usual there were hunters eager to make a reputation who did not hesitate to kill a tame turkey if they were afforded a chance. This class of hunter makes so many trespass notices possible and hurts the chances of others to hunt legitimate game on many acres of land. One act in this line occurred to the turkey flock of J. D. McClintock, whose pens are near Gibbons Park, Mifflin county. Mr. McClintock makes a business of raising fine turkeys and has by patience and hard work built up one of the finest flocks in the country. His flock contains much wild blood on account of wild turkeys coming from the mountain and mixing with those of others. Mr. McClintock takes great pride in his flock and hundreds of people who have seen them admired them. Last year two hunters, who are known, killed two birds out of this flock and took them home, saying that they had killed them on the mountains and that they were wild ones. This year two men, who are reported as known, killed the finest and highest-priced gobble owned by Mr. McClintock and said they had killed a wild turkey.
