brought five survivors to port. The accident occurred in American waters during a fog Monday.

Under the rules of censorship, the place of the accident and other details are withheld. It is assumed that the boats were engaged in a practice cruise. The cause of the collision has not been ascertained.

The F-1 was one of the old type of submarines. A sister boat, the F-4, submerged in Honolulu harbor three years ago and failed to operate. All the crew of officers and men were suffocated. At the time submarines of this class were found to be generally faulty in construction.
