$200 IN STOVE

Lewistown, Pa., Dec. 27.—John Carlos, an Italian workman at Hawstone, in the Lewistown =arrows, got rid of $200 in short order. In ten minutes the bills had disappeared. He used the money to start a fire in his room in one of the shantles at the brick plant. Several companions who were with the man at the time that he burned the money, earned by hard labor, tried to keep him from destroying it, but they were kept at bay with a big revolver that Carlos pulled from his pocket and fired a shot into the ceiling by way of warning that he would not be trifled with while he destroyed his savings. Carlos was locked up in a small shantly and word was sent to Lewistown for an officer to come after the man. He pryed open a window afid escaped deeper into the wilds, where it is feared that he will perish from exposure before he can be found. There is reason to believe that Carlos is insane, as he also burned his best clothes. He was a quiet chap and was well ilked at Hawstone.
