

Reading for Women and the Family

The Yukon Trail

By William MacLeod Raine (Continued) A ring at the door interrupted her. Sheba stepped forward and let in an Indian woman with a little boy clinging to her hand.

Bringing Up Father

From the folds of her shawl she drew a letter. The girl glanced at the address, then opened and read what was written. She looked up, puzzled, first at the comely, footed Indian woman and afterward at the handsome little brown-faced paopoe.

Scotsman was grim as that of a hanging judge. Gordon started to explain, then stopped with a shrug. What was the use? The man would never believe him in the world.

used more than I've given. I've kept her and the boy. It's been secret. If you had asked, I would have told you the whole story.

Life's Problems Are Discussed

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow The man in uniform is going to and fro on the earth these days and up and down it.

They were composed partly of officers and partly of men, and hilariously recited the insulting epithets showered on the shoulder-strapped players by coaches who an hour afterward would be standing at attention, with hands up in stiff salute, when one of these same officers passed.

Many Exhibitors to Show at Big Automobile Event

Thirty-two firms of the automobile business have thus far promised to exhibit at the big show of the Harrisburg Motor Dealers which begins January 26 and ends February 2.

U. S. TO USE MAIL TRUCKS

The introduction of motor cars for handling mail routes came a step nearer last evening when the time expired for proposing bids to equip the circuit that is to take in Harrisburg, Reading and Hagerstown.

A Sure Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

What is it that you have to tell me about this boy's father? Metecese began to speak. At the first mention of Macdonald's name Sheba's eyes dilated. Her smile, her sweet, glad pleasure at Gordon's arrival, were already gone like the flame of a blown candle.

Macdonald closed the door behind them, then strode frowning up and down the room. The fear was growing on him that for all his great driving power he could not shake this slim girl from the view to which she clung.

He had felt this in a way, had sensed the "different" quality without knowing just what it was, but it remained for a young captain of the regulars with whom I was talking to put it into words for me.

They are shuttling back and forth across the continent, doing more traveling in many cases than they would otherwise have dreamed of accomplishing in all their lives, and incidentally becoming familiar with the people and customs of all sections. More than that, they are going across the ocean and coming into intimate contact with the people and customs over there.

Does not all this point to a tremendous breaking down of sectionalism and provincialism and to the development of a new, more national consciousness but of a new world consciousness? Broadened and enriched by their experiences, these men should handle the business of the future with a quickened intelligence.

Then add to this the effect of the "human" quality in that organization in which they are banded, and what is to be the result? For years the world has been talking about "The Brotherhood of Man." The talk didn't mean very much.

What women approach the critical changing period of their lives that comes between the ages of forty and fifty, unimpaired of its tremendous importance to their future health and happiness. He knew that he must justify himself before Sheba or lose her. As he stood in the dusk so tall and rigid, he knew her heart was steel to him.

And what do they get when you bring them back? "Six months in prison for a first offense," he answered. "Repeaters in proportion." The quizzical little twinkle showed in his eye, and he added: "The circumstances have a lot of bearing, though."

All things succeed which really deserve to, which fill a real need, which prove their worth. The fact that the famous old root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has for three generations been relieving women of this country from the worst forms of female ills and has won such a strong place in our American homes proves its merit beyond the question of a doubt.
