Senator Hollis Delivers Initial Speech on Government Railroad Management

Washington, Jan. 4.—The English method of meeting the transportation crisis by taking over the control of railroads immediately after that country entered the war in 1914 was explained in a speech made in the Senate to-day by Senator Hollis of New Hampshire.

Under the English method, Senator Hollis said, the government guaranteed stockholders the same earnings as paid during the year preceding the nationalization, with a plan of conciliation and arbitration, wages were increased through war bonuses with due regard to the increased cost of living.

The unions of railway men, through their executive committees, declared Senator Hollis, "have acted throughout the war in a patriotic and reasonable manner, but their claims to advances in wages or bonuses on the increased cost of living and not on their power to prevent the operation of the railroads, have realized that a strike would be a strike against the nation, not against the companies.
