Without doubt one of the most intensely human interest pictures ever presented at the presented at the colonial manager of the most intensely human interest pictures ever presented at the colonial is seen in his best role since "The transfer one now being shown, starring winsome June Caprice and entitled "Unknown, 274." The piece takes its title from the way June is registered at an orphange after her father has been injured so as to lose his memory and is thereafter unable to look for her. After being horribly abused at the orphange she falls into the hands of vultures, who try to rob her of her violin, the only thing she has to remember her father, and which afterwards is the means of finding him. She has also attracted a millionaire, who eventually marries her and all ends well.
