The Yukon Trail

By William MacLeod Raine

The little man never guessed how close he came to being flung through the transom over the door, but his instinct warned him to stop. His objection died away in a mumble.

"Of course I'll do whatever you say," he added a second time.

"Se you do" advised his chief, an ugly look in his eyes. "Tell him he gets till the next boat. If he's here after that, he'd better go heeled, for I'll shoot on sight wherever we meet."

Selfridge went on his errand with lagging feet. He found Elliot sitting moodily alone on the porch of the hotel.

In Gordon's pocket there was a note to Macdonald explaining that he had nothing to do with the coming of Metetsee. He had expected to send it by the hotel porter that evening, but the curt order to leave town filled him with a chill anger. The dictator of affairs at Kusik might think what he pleased for all the explanation he would get from him.

"Tell your master I don't take orders from him," he told Wally quietly. "I'll stay till my work here is done." He had moved a few yards down the street. Now Gordon turned, lean-joined and active, and trod with crisp, confident step back to the hotel. He had said all that was necessary to say. Two men standing on the porch nodded a good evening to him. Gordon, about to pass, glanced at them again. They were Northrup and Trelawney, two of the miners who had had trouble with Macdonald on the boat.

On impulse he stopped. "Found work yet?" he asked.

"Found a job and lost it again," Northrup answered sullenly.

"Too bad."

"Too bad."

Bringing Up Father

"Macdonald passed the word along that we weren't to get work. So our boss fired us. The whole district is closed to us. We been black-listed," explained Trelawney.

"And were busted," added his mate.

Elliot was always free-handed. Perhaps he felt just now unusually sympathetic toward these victims of the high-handed methods of Macdonald. From his pocket he took a small leather purse and gave a piece of gold to each of them.

"Just as a loan to carry you for a couple of days till you get something to do," he suggested.

Northrup demurred, but after a little pressing accepted the accommodation.

"I pay you soon back," he promised.

Trelawney laughed recklessly. He had been drinking.

"You bet. Me too."

His companion flashed a look of warning at him and explained that they were going down the river to look for work outside of the district.

Suddenly Trelawney broke loose and began to curse Macdonald with a bitterness that surprised the government agent. What struck him most, though, was the obvious anxiety of Northrup to quiet his partner and to gloss over what he had said.

Elliot bought an automatic revolver next morning and a box of cartridges. He was not looking for trouble, but he intended to be prepared for it when trouble came looking for him. In the afternoon he walked out of town and practiced shooting at tin cans for half an hour. On his way back he met Peter Paget.

The engineer came straight to the subject in his mind.

Selfridge came to see me last night. He told me about the trouble between you and Macdonald, Gordon. You must leave town till he cools down. Macdonald is a bad man with a gat."

"I'll be no trouble of my making. But if he starts any 'I'll be there, Macdonald doesn't own the earth, you know. I've been sent up here by Uncle Sam on business, and you can bet your last dollar I'll stay on the job till I'm through."

"Of course you've got to finish your job. But it doesn't all have to be done right here. Just for a week or two."

"Tell your friend something else while you're on the subject. If I drop him, I go scot free because he is interfering with me on duty. I'll put Selfridge on the stand to prove it. But if he should kill me, his last chance for getting the Macdonald claims patented would be gone. The public would raise such a howl that the administration would have to throw your friend and Guttenchilds overboard to save itself."

life's officer and led, that their equipment be the most modern and effective which can be devised, that the sanitary and commissary departments shall be operated with the highest order of efficiency, and that there be adequate provision for plenty of healthful amusement and recreation.

We will brook no repetition of an "embalmed beef" scandal, no "fever camps," no such epidemics as in previous wars have cost more victims than the bullets of the enemy.

But, as history shows us, every army is threatened with a danger of a more insidious character than any shrapnel or shells or explosive bombs or poisonous gases which the Germans could direct against our lines, a danger more horrible in its ravages than any scourge of pestilence or fever, for it shatters not only the soldier himself, but is passed on to weaken and make miserable his descendants unto the third and fourth generation.

It is a menace to society which is Goods.

Understand, I am casting no aspersions on the character of these brave chaps who have so unhesitatingly answered the call of country. I agree thoroughly with Mr. Raymond Posick that "A cleaner army or a finer set of young men was never mobilized under a flag."

But every woman in America wants to see that army come back as clean and fine as it went away. And we cannot shut our eyes to plain facts. Since human nature is what it is—especially the exuberant, reckless human nature of youth—it is up to the country to consider this peril, and prepare against it openly, candidly, sensibly, as we prepare against those lesser dangers to which our army must be exposed.

The best medical, sociological and military experts of the country are giving this matter their attention, and whatever measures they advise should be unhesitatingly put into effect.

But beyond this there should be an impressive personal appeal to every man in the ranks. In each company there should be aroused an esprit du corps on this question, similar to West Point's boasted "Code of Honor," which would make every man in a sense his brother's keeper, and send to Coventry the reckless offender.

Remember, these lads are adame with high ideals and a stern sense of duty. They are gambling their lives that America may live. Can we not ask them at the same time they are conquering the Germans to conquer themselves, and resist temptation for the America—their America—of the future?

I would not deny them one reasonable pleasure. Sensible women would never dream of attempting to impose upon those khaki-clad battalions the restrictions of a young ladies' seminary. But I do hope they fully realize that the womanhood of their country expects them to come back clean.

Advice to the Lovelorn

No Real Harm

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have a sister of twenty, and I am seventeen years of age. Some time ago my sister's gentleman friend enlisted in the United States Army at Yaphank, L. I. While he was out on furlough my sister and myself were invited to his house for supper, and on leaving he asked me to write a jolly letter to him. I did so, but he did not answer. On his

WHY HAIR FALLS OUT

Dandruff causes a feverish irritation of the scalp, the hair roots shrink, loosen and fall out. To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of Danderine at any drug store, or from the advertiser. Dip your finger in the jar, rub a little in your hand and rub well into the scalp. After a few applications all dandruff disappears and the hair stops coming out.—Adv.

EAT LESS MEAT AND TAKE SALTS IF KIDNEYS HURT

Says a tablespoonful of Salts flushes Kidneys, stopping Backache.

Meat forms Urich Acid, which excites Kidneys and Weakens Bladder

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clean up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headache, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

particular harm, if both of you remember that he is your sister's sweetheart, and if your letters are just little friendly notes written to cheer a lonely soldier. But human nature is a little inclined to fickle-ness. Your sister recognizes this, I suppose and wonders if you are endangering her happiness. Don't you know some really "lonely" soldier to whom your jolly letters would bring a real message of comfort and help?

BAKER'S COCOA

HAS GREAT FOOD VALUE

THE food value of cocoa has been proven by centuries of use, and dietitians and physicians the world over are enthusiastic in their endorsements of it. It is said to contain more nourishment than beef, in a more readily assimilated form. The choice, however, should be a high-grade cocoa,—"Baker's" of course.
