

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE WITH EMPEY

By Arthur Guy Empey

The battle of the Somme was still raging. I had been hit by three rifle bullets, one through the left cheek, the other two through the left shoulder, while engaged in a trench raid for prisoners, and was on my journey to Blyghty.

I remember being carried down a flight of steps and placed on a white table in a brightly lighted room, a doctor and a sergeant bending over me—a delicious drink of Bass ale, then the whispered word "chloroform," something like a gas helmet being placed over my nose and mouth—a couple of long drawn gasping breaths a rumbling in my ears; then the skyline of New York suddenly appeared. This was quickly followed by the Statue of Liberty shaking hands with the Singer building; rushing, hissing sound in my ears, like escaping steam, and then—blackness.

I opened my eyes. I was lying on a stretcher, covered with blankets, in a low-roofed, wooden building. Across the way from me was a row of stretchers, each stretcher holding a wounded Tommy, some lying flat, others propped up by folded blankets. Others were sitting on their stretchers tenderly caressing an arm bound up with white bandages.

Occasionally a stretcher reclining on which was a muffled and bloody soldier would be carried down the aisle by two stretcher bearers. This stretcher would be placed in an open space in the row opposite.

I could hear a hum of conversation.

BEIDLEMAN GETS WARM WELCOME

Friends Here Are Pleased With Senator's Mention For Lieut. Governor

Senator E. E. Beidleman, prominently mentioned for the Republican nomination for lieutenant governor, was warmly greeted by Dauphin and Cumberland county friends when he returned from the Armstrong dinner at Pittsburgh and received assurances of support.

Mr. Beidleman said that he had no statement to make regarding candidacy for any office at present.

People at the Capitol declined to make any comment upon the Beidleman boom and the Governor and other officers refused to discuss any of the statements. Neither would anyone here discuss the possibility of Gifford Pinchot remaining as a candidate after J. Denny O'Neil announced next week.

Considerable interest was added to the situation by announcement that William A. Hange, former public service commissioner and mentioned as likely to be named to the vacancy caused by his resignation, was coming here to-night at invitation of the Governor. He will probably remain until to-morrow and then go east.

The men were playing poker for small stakes, it is said. Some cards were requisitioned.

The league is a body of citizens organized for the purpose of securing the election of the city manager.

Mr. Gross said to-day that he had not as yet investigated the complaint, but expected to visit the alderman's office later in the day.

Suburb's Only Coal Is in Garfield Cellars

Cleveland, Ohio, Jan. 12.—There isn't a chunk of hard coal in Mentor, a Cleveland suburb, dealers and citizens assert, except thirty-two tons—one carload—that is in the cellars of three empty houses on the Garfield estate.

One-third of the coal is in the basement of the 16-room house of Mrs. Lucretia A. Garfield, the mother of National Fuel Administrator Garfield. Another third is in the 15-room house of James R. Garfield, a brother of Dr. Garfield, and the remainder in the 20-room house of John Newell, a brother-in-law. All three residences are said to be unoccupied at present.

Michael Gunesth, the caretaker, is burning soft coal in his cottage.

Storm Cuts Chicago From Outside World

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Chicago is isolated from railroad communication with the outside world by one of the worst blizzards in its history. Business is paralyzed. No milk trains arrived nor were coal wagons able to move ten per cent of the fuel needed. The thermometer dropped to fourteen degrees below zero and a sharp wind from the northwest added to the suffering.

Williamsport, Pa., Jan. 12.—The worst windstorm in years swept northern Pennsylvania last night and to-day. Telephone service in some sections was paralyzed due to the falling of poles and the breaking of wires.

A Pennsylvania railroad watchman who had taken refuge in a watch-box along the West Branch at Nisbet, narrowly escaped injury when the shed was blown over the river bank. In the city trees, signs and chimneys were blown down. The temperature rose during the day, turning the snow which accompanied the storm into deep slush, making country roads almost impassable.
