Mount Pleasant Press Auxil- Prominent Men of the City iary Receives Note of Thanks From Chattanooga, Tenn.

Below is a specimen of the letters written by soldiers who received sweaters knitted by members of the Mount Pleasant Press Red Cross auxiliary. This auxiliary was organized by Miss Helen McFarland, October 10, 1917, and since that time has turned out eight dozen pairs bed socks, five and a half dozen nightingales, two dozen ether caps, two dozen surgeon's caps, two and one-third dozen leggings, seven dozen hot water bottle covers, five dozen comfort kits, fifty-three pillowcases, nine scarfs, one pair wristlets, three helinets, seventy sweaters. The work is done in spare moments during the day and on Monday evenings, when the building is

Superintendent of Mails and His Bride Spending Honeymoon in Eastern Cities

Reading, Pa., Jan. 16. — Because of the heavy snow and the fact that mining operations of the Reading Coal and Iron Company were brought to a standstill yesterday very little is done at any of the breakers. In consequence of the storm, which rail-roadmen say, was one of the worst experienced in the anthracite regions for many years, only about 500 cars were taken out of St. Clair yard last night. Conditions this morning were reported much improved.

The sudden dropping of the temperature interfered with the clearing of the tracks and the movement of traffic. Conditions on the Shamokin division of the Reading have never been worse.
