On Way to France With U. S. Flying Corps, Local Lad Tells of Experience

The observations of a flying man, formerly of Harrisburg, L. E. McGinley, now with the Twelfth Aero Squadron of the American Expeditionary Forces, as contained in a recent letter to his mother here are decidedly interesting. McGinley had not yet arrived at the front when this was written, only got so far as Nova Scotia, but his remarks are shrewd and entertaining.

"We left New York," he relates, "at 2 a. m. Tuesday, and we were in Philadelphia at 5 o'clock. By one that day we were on the water but anchored. In the morning we were off again. Friday found us along the Maine coast where the sea was rough and the boys began to feed the fishes. My turn came just before dinner. I am on the steamship Northland, a British ship, hired by the United States for the movement of troops. It is about 400 feet long and there are 2,000 troops aboard, all belonging to the aviation service. We have all kinds of fun with the crew; they are all English, but talk like Irish. Expressions such as 'these meself' and 'bloody-blooming,' and so many other funny things one hears. Nine out of ten are under 18 years of age because all the rest of their men, 18 or over, have gone to war. One of them said the 'bloody, blooming Huns are afraid of the bloody Yanks.' I am at least hoping so."

Columbia County to Fight Lesher

Sunbury, Pa., Jan. 21.—Congressional politics in the sixteenth district, composed of Northumberland, Montour, Columbia and Sullivan counties, is starting, and it is apparent that John V. Lesher, of Sunbury, present member, will have some difficulty in holding his seat.

Lesher is an avowed candidate for the Democratic renomination. He will be opposed by Frederick T. Ikeler, a Bloomsburg lawyer, who, it is said, will have the support of the forces that elected John G. Harman, of Bloomsburg, president judge of the Columbia-Montour district last year. Lesher, however, is strong, because of his numerous postoffice and federal appointments. He will be vigorously opposed by friends of those who failed to get jobs, and because he voted against the woman suffrage amendment and nation-wide prohibition.

Republicans are talking of John H. Glass, of Shamokin.

MARKETS

New York, Jan. 19.—Coppers, oils and a few specialties featured today's dull stock market at extreme gains of 1 to 5 points. The tone was irregular in the early stage, steels, shippings and minor rails reacting 1 to 2 points. These were almost fully regained in the covering movement of the last hour, except for marine preferred, which continued heavy. The closing was firm. Sales approximated 225,000 shares. Liberty 3 1-2's sold at 98.54 to 98.48; first 4's at 96.90 to the new minimum of 96.70 and second 4's at 96.18 to 96.12.

Wilson to Consider Taking Over the Meat Industry

Washington, Jan. 19.—Chicago stockyard employes last night asked President Wilson to take over the great packing plants of the country, and the President promised such a step.

A delegation of labor leaders told the President that conditions in the plants are now intolerable, wages low and treatment brutal. The workers even offered to allow the President to regulate their wages, hours and general conditions.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who accompanied the Chicago labor leaders, said afterward that the request for government control was made as "a last resort," and that the President would consider other methods of relieving the tense situation.

No Basis For Election Charges Against Gross

Alderman A. M. Landis dismissed the suit against City Commissioner E. Z. Gross, who was charged by John P. Guyer, of the Dauphin County Law and Order League, with a violation of the election laws. Attorneys for Commissioner Gross contended the law requiring campaign expense returns made the provision that in case contributions or expenditures did not exceed $50 no itemized statement is required. The alderman sustained the position.

Piquant Billie Burke, in the greatest story of her wonderfully brilliant career, delighted the audiences at the Regent, yesterday, in her latest Paramount release, "The Land of Promise," which will be shown for the last times to-day. It is a story that was the greatest stage success of its season, and will take its place as one of the greatest sensations of the year in screenland.

Billie Burke in "The Land of Promise"

"The Land of Promise" tells a story that has to do with the unhappy life of a girl "companion" to a wealthy old man and her longing for the happiness that comes to other girls and seems to have passed her by. How she went to Canada, thinking it the "land of promise," and found only misery even in that fair country; how she married a rough farmer, loathing him all the while, but hoping to escape the monotony of her life; and how she finally came to love him and appreciate his good qualities is graphically depicted by winsome Billie Burke in the role of Nora Marsh.

A family squabble is part of the story, and incidentally it is a gem of a screen situation. It shows that it was splendidly directed ,is well acted, and so naturally one feels like an eavesdropper for being around.

Billie Burke has for her leading man Thomas Meighan, and is supported by a cast, which semes to have been in a race for the acting honors. Mary Alden, John Raymond, Helen Tracy and J. W. Johnson form part of the cast, and perform exceptionally well.

What a wonderful title for a motion picture drama. All those who witnessed yesterday's showing at the Victoria Theater of Jewel Carmen, the noted beauty and talented star in this remarkable silent drama, will agree that the play lived up to its name. It is totally different from all other western dramas, and for that reason all the more interesting. The story moves about a young girl whose father, having been murdered, is compelled to earn her livelihood by being a dancehall girl in a typical western dancehall of the early days. Being young and beautiful, many of the men want to marry her, all of which she refuses until one day, when one of the younger men, a newcomer from the east, begs her to be his wife, only to find that they are brother and sister. A letter the boy receives from his mother informs him she is dying and that only an operation, costing more money than they can possibly raise, will save her life. It is then that the girl jumps upon a table in the saloon and dancehall and auctions herself off to the man who makes the highest bid. The man who marries the girl is the most interesting character of the story. You'll like him. "The Kingdom of Love" will be shown at the Victoria for the last time to-day.

Jewel Carmen in "The Kingdom of Love"

One of the speediest of musical comedy offerings is that headlining the vaudeville bill at the Majestic the latter half of this week. It is entitled "Hilda's Ankle" and is presented by a company of ten capable players. The piece is full of highly amusing situations, which keep the audience in constant laughter. The song and dance numbers are put over in a pleasing manner, and the girls look and dress attractive. Another popular feature of the bill is a lively song and patter skit presented by Ward, Wilson and Janese. Completing the list of sterling attractions are Wheeler and Moran, in comedy songs and nonsense, all of which is appreciated by the audience; the Mitzuma Japs, in an excellent novelty balancing act, and Evelyn May and Company, presenting a laughable comedy sketch, entitled "Live Wires."

"Hilda's Ankle" at the Majestic

The attractions booked for the early part of next week are Eddie Mcntrose, comedy acrobat; Green, McHenry and Dean, in a lively singing and comedy offering; McLoughlin and Evans, offering a comedy song and patter skit; "Somewhere in France," twenty minutes with four boys in the trenches, and one other Keith act.

A performance that will mark a wide departure from the prevailing theatrical fare will be that of John Drew and Margaret Illington in "The Gay Lord Quex," which comes to the Orpheum Theater on Saturday evening, January 26. These stars have been brought into association by John D. Williams in the Pinero comedy masterpiece as the two persons in the present-day theater best qualified to play the two chief parts. "The Gay Lord Quex" represents the full flowering of the abilities that the noted English playwright earlier displayed in such comedies as "Sweet Lavender," "The Magistrate," "Dandy Dick" and "The Amazons." The Pinero of "The Gay Lord Quex" is the Pinero of vastly grown powers of plot and suspense, of characterization and of urbanity and elegance. There is the most downright conflict of will against will in "The Gay Lord Quex." The chief figures of "The Gay Lord Quex"—Lord Quex and Sophy Fullgarney, the manicurist—engage in a clash that for vigor and suspense stands without a rival in the modern drama. Nobleman and working girl both bring to bear all the weapons of sophistication and worldly wiseness upon each other, one to win the hand of a beautiful young girl, the other to prevent such a consummation. They stand pretty evenly matched in their great encounter, and the issue is balanced between them until that great burst of feeling which divulges to both their innate fitness. From this fierce encounter neither escapes altogether unscathed, but they emerge with a great mutual respect. Sophy makes herself a spy and an eavesdropper to save her foster sister, Muriel, from what she thinks an evil marriage; Quex cajoles, attempts to bribe and then threatens to ruin the good name of the exasperating Sophy in order to win Muriel. He has put folly behind him; the unsavoury past can be buried but for this vixenish working girl, whom no threat can weaken, no bribe lure. Each meanderella Man" has everything that was ning of their encounter, but they end it in quite a different mood. And this because they both have sounded a genuine, human, touching note, namely, of generosity. Quex is not the villain Sophy thought him nor is she the malicious vixen he thought her. They both have Muriel's happiness in view, more than one could who tried to and this they ensure.

To miss Goldwyn's "The Cinderella Man," a screen presentation of Edward Childs Carpenter's delightful comedy-drama, is said to miss seeing one of the finest productions, both from a scenic and a material standpoint, that has ever been shown at the Colonial Theater. And the star! Words fail to express the indefinable charm of Mae March, who is heralded as the "Bernhardt of the Screen." She brings youthful romance and tears and laughter about as close to the spectator as the silent drama permits. Her weeping scenes with the sunshine peeping through the tears are remarkable. "The Cinly appraises the other at the begin-found on the stage, and then some. The story reaches out and finds one's heart.

Tuesday—Versatile Emily Stevens will be starred in a picturization of the Broadway play, "Daybreak."
