of several carloads of coal on an out-of-the-way siding was the cause of a general raid to be made on the cars Sunday night and many tons of the black diamonds were carried away by persons to tide them over the shortage of fuel here. Fearing such an occurance officers went to the scene during the night but much of the coal had disappeared before their arrival. It is said that vehicles of various kinds were used for hauling away the coal and that people who were well fixed with this world's goods apportioned some of it, while some of it was taken by persons who later disposed of it to friends. Detective Charles H. Wilson has secured the names of a number of persons said to be implicated in the affair, some of whom were caught in the act, and a rather sensational time is promised when the arrests are made. of several carloads of coal on an
