

THIS PROSPECTOR FINDS FIVE TONS OF COAL IN HIS CELLAR

Ho, you seekers after coal! If you want to get some of the precious lumps of anthracite, be yourselves to the S. S. Kresge Five and Ten Cent Store, down Market street, and get a position there. E. B. Chenoweth, manager of the store, is giving away to his employes about five tons of perfectly good coal.

About six years ago, the building was heated by furnaces, and the supply of coal was bought. When the city team was installed, the coal was forgotten and was allowed to stay in the cellar, while the price went up higher and higher. Finally Mr. Chenoweth unearthed it, or rather unhooked it, and offered a really good offer to the girls in his store. He heard several of them telling about the coal shortage, and immediately offered the coal to them, free of charge, provided that they would get the means of transportation.
