Plan Free Organ Recitals at Noon in Y.M.C.A., After Prof. Decevee's Suggestion

Shortly before his death the late Professor E. J. Decevee suggested free organ recitals at Fahnestock Hall in the Y. M. C. A. building, at Second and Locust streets. It was the thought of this lamented leader in the music circles of the city that hundreds of men, women and children would be glad to drop into Fahnestock Hall at the noon hour to lister to an organ recital by one of the talented organists of Harrisburg to cooperate with the Y. M. C. A. in the proposed noon recitals which should be free to the people. Many men and women would probably be delighted to have an opportunity to hear good music in a comfortable place during the noon hour and it is believed the organists of Harrisburg will be glad to organize an association for these recitals.

Whether they should be given more than once a week would depend upon their appreciation by the public, but it is the opinion of those who are familiar with organ recitals in other cities that the plan might be worked out with the general approbation of the community.

So many calls for immediate help have come from householders whose ceilings are falling because of the leaking water that the tinners have been swamped. One dealer in roofing to-day declared that unless there is a sudden thaw sufficient to carry away the great accumulation of ice and snow, fully 50 per cent. of the homes in the city will be damaged before spring.

Icicles hanging from copings and spoutings have nelped open places for the entry of the water, it is said. Then, too, virtually all tin roofs have been greatly weakened by the weight of the snow and ice on them for many weeks. The Ice also prevents the water from running off freely.
