SONS OF REST GET THE SMILEAGE BOOK IDEA

"This Penn-Harris building," commented the old codger, "has given us many a day of intellectual fun and we'd not be blamed for anything—unless it was tearing down the building."

"But," insisted the Innocent By-stander, "the phiting together of one-story buildings on North particularly good fun, would it, especially if your only time to watch was at night?"

"I don't see," came from the other, "sir—ee," came from the other.

"Alright," was the quick response. "Uncle Sam's soldiers in camp haven't anything to do but that in their leisure time, except seeing the show provided for them by the sale of Smilage Books. Come across and buy a few."

"The Sons of Rest" came—for a dollar each—and as the Smilage Books changed hands, the old codger remarked that it was the first time that the "Sons of Rest" had taken their eyes off the Penn-Harris construction long enough to see whether they really had any money or not.

YES, SIR! SNOW SHOVELS ARE AS SCARCE AS ANTHRACITE company and if the big order of snow shovels do not arrive by Monday next Mayor Keister will be disappointed in the results of his proclamation.

So sweeping was the demand for these useful implements that stores have been unable to keep up with the demand.

What's the first thing I'd do? "I'd buy a snow shovel, a real shovel, for the snow is six feet high around my diggings."
