When I returned from Europe and found the newspapers featuring the struttings and vauntings of little men, in their bits of neighborhoods, about little bits of neighborhoods, about little bits of questions, it seemed so trivial, so wrong. "I don't care whether the Fuel Administration was right or wrong. We've got to face many more things of that sort. Candy factories, manifacturers of athletic goods, potteres have got to stop, shut down and top absorbing the labor which should go into ships."

After saying that only the solidarity of America could accomplish the ask presented by the fact that estimates based on 1917 showed that in 1918 submarine warfare would destroy more ships than were included in the projected shipbuilding programs of the United States and Jerat Britain, Mr. Colby protested sgainst the partisan criticism which has swept the capital.

"I am not at liberty to disclose to out the full significance of the submarine statistics," he said, gravely, sithough after his talk he reaffirmed this sentiment in conjection with he statement that in any circumtances the United States will build nore ships this year than ever have been built by any nation in the hisory of the world.

for the Harrisburg chapter, but this is expected to be a wonderful booster for the work. The league will take in 1,000 schoolteachers and 75,000 school children, who must all come under the direction of head-quarters. To handle this tremendous addition Miss McCormick said that many helpers will be needed and that mow is the time to make yourself known to the Red Cross.

A department right now which is badly in need of assistance is the filling department, conducted by Mrs. Gillespie. Thirty-six thousand members of the Red Cross in this districtall want to have their names tabulated and filled and this is a big job. Step in, Mrs. and Miss Harrisburg.
