A STRAIGHT LITTLE FROCK.
All of the frocks of the coming season are to have straight lines, though distinctions are permissible between the hips and the knees. This design in challis with a crinkled crepe strip is most effective. It is in two shades of brown. The neck is trimmed with a deep collar of tub satin, held together with a trifling, but very smart bow of ribbon. Medium size requires 6 yards 36-inch material, with 3/4 yard extra.

LIFE'S PROBLEMS ARE DISCUSSED

By MRS. WILSON WOODROW

Lysippos of Lifyon one time carved a statue, the figure of woman standing on tiptoe to indicate that she was always running and with wings on her feet to show that she passed like the wind. She carried a razor in her hand to signify that she struck more sharply than any steel. Her hair was worn long in front so that she might be readily seized by anyone she approached, and short behind to indicate that once she had flitted by on her winged feet, no one was able to hold her. And on the pedestal Lysippos cut this inscription: "My name, O stranger, is Opportunity, controller of all things, and I stand here as a lesson to thee!"

tiny of that person; whereas the truth is that Opportunity is a daily, almost hourly visitor to everyone of us, appearing often in such humble, commonplace guise that we never suspect who she is.

Fashions of To-Day - By May Manton

There are very new features in this frock and very attractive features, and, withal, it is the simplest possible garment to make. The round neck, and the short sleeves will appeal to most mothers, but in mid-Winter there is sometimes demand for greater warmth and the small view gives a suggestion that is important. Really, the frock is just a plain little garment with a straight piece arranged over the lower edge, but that straight piece is so stiched that it forms big, capacious pockets that are a joy. On the figure, it is made of one of the pretty plain challis with flet lace banding as trimming. You could copy it in any simple childlike material.
