Conservation of food was strongly urged in an address by C. J. Hepburn, chief counsel for the Federal Food Administration in Pennsylvania, who spoke before the annual meeting of Group 5 of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association, held at the Masonic Temple to-day. Mr. Hepburn urged particularly that wheat be conserved. Millions of bushels of wheat must be sent across to France in the next few months if we expect to win this war, he declared.
A business meeting of the group was held at 12 o'clock. George W. Stine, cashier of the Annville National Bank, pronouncing the invocation. Reports of committees and officers were read. Luncheon was served at 1 o'clock to 255 representatives of the various banks in the district. "Government Financing and Its Effect on Local Conditions" was discussed by Joseph Wayne, Jr., president of the Girard National Bank, Philadelphia. T. A. FIRST CONTRACT FOR BIG DEPOT

Susquehanna, depends upon a resurvey of the whole district, to be made by engineers of the War Department in company with a committee of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce which yesterday called at the War Department and went over the matter with Major Wells, the officer in charge.
This committee, made up of President Andrew S. Patterson; W. J. Rose, division freight agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad at this point; Frank E. Musser and John F. Dapp, called upon Major Wells and told him that they thought a grave error would be made if the depots were placed on the West Shore. They showed that the Middletown plot has been flooded only twice in a long period of years and then only when water was backed up from the river through the spillway of the old canal and then offered the Government all the slag needed to remove that danger by filling up the old canal or any other low places.

They pointed out also that the "cross-river" site would be mosquito-infested in summer unless Marsh run is treated at great expense; that the sanitation for such a large number of men would be expensive; that there are no railroad yard facilities at New Cumberland; that the plant at that place would interfere with the low grade and Northern Central lines of the Pennsylvania railroad; that it has no ready-built tracks, lines or electrical power supplies, and that in no other way is it comparable with the Middletown plot. They showed him that there are 200 acres of very high ground adjoining the fair site at Middletown and that directly in the rear lies the fine site of old Camp Meade, where 35,000 men were housed in Spanish-American War days.
They also brought out the advantage from a railroad standpoint of the Middletown site and finally proposed that they be permitted to make a resurvey of the whole situation in company with a representative of the War Department in an effort to show that the Middletown site is by far superior to the other. On the result of this survey depends the location of the big depot.
